

A painting of a desert landscape at sunset. A dirt path leads from the foreground into the distance, flanked by low-lying green and blue shrubs. Several tall, green saguaro cacti are scattered throughout the scene. In the background, dark, silhouetted mountains rise against a warm, orange and red sky. The overall style is impressionistic with visible brushstrokes.

Pipits Song A Love Story:

The Gendered Score: Music in 1940s Melodrama and the Woman's Film Heather Laing, 2017-07-05 Heather Laing examines for the first time the issues of gender and emotion that underpin the classical style of film scoring but that have until now remained unquestioned and untheorized thus providing a benchmark for thinking on more recent and alternative styles of scoring. Many theorists have discussed this type of music in film as a signifier of emotion and the feminine a capacity in which it is frequently associated with female characters. The full effect of such an association on either female or male characterization however has not been examined. This book considers the effects of this association by progress through three stages: cultural historical precedents, the generic parameters of melodrama and the woman's film and the narrativization of music in film through diegetic performance and the presence of musicians as characters. Case studies of specific films provide textual and musical analyses and the genres of melodrama and the woman's film have been chosen as representative not only of the epitome of the Hollywood scoring style but also of the narrative association of women, emotion and music. Laing leads to the conclusion that music functions as more than merely a signifier of emotion. Rather it takes a crucial role in both indicating and determining how emotion is actually understood as part of the construction of gender and its representation in film.
