Ancient Pathways, Ancestral Knowledge Nancy J. Turner, 2014-07-20

Volume 1 The History and Practice of Indigenous Plant Knowledge Volume 2 The Place and Meaning of Plants in Indigenous Cultures and Worldviews

Nancy Turner has studied Indigenous peoples' knowledge of plants and environments in northwestern North America for over forty years. In Ancient Pathways, Ancestral Knowledge she integrates her research into a two-volume ethnobotanical tour de force. Drawing on information shared by Indigenous botanical experts and collaborators, the ethnographic and historical record, and from linguistics, palaeobotany, archaeology, phytogeography, and other fields, Turner weaves together a complex understanding of the traditions of use and management of plant resources in this vast region. She follows Indigenous inhabitants over time and through space, showing how they actively participated in their environments, managed and cultivated valued plant resources, and maintained key habitats that supported their dynamic cultures for thousands of years, as well as how knowledge was passed on from generation to generation and from one community to another. To understand the values and perspectives that have guided Indigenous ethnobotanical knowledge and practices, Turner looks beyond the details of individual plant species and their uses to determine the overall patterns and processes of their development, application, and adaptation.

Volume 1 presents a historical overview of ethnobotanical knowledge in the region before and after European contact. The ways in which Indigenous peoples used and interacted with plants for nutrition, technologies, and medicine are examined. Drawing connections between similarities across languages, Turner compares the names of over 250 plant species in more than fifty Indigenous languages and dialects to demonstrate the prominence of certain plants in various cultures and the sharing of goods and ideas between peoples. She also examines the effects that introduced species and colonialism had on the region's Indigenous peoples and their ecologies.

Volume 2 provides a sweeping account of how Indigenous organizational systems developed to facilitate the harvesting, use, and cultivation of plants to establish economic connections across linguistic and cultural borders and to preserve and manage resources and habitats. Turner describes the worldviews and philosophies that emerged from the interactions between peoples and plants and how these understandings are expressed through cultures, stories, and narratives. Finally, she explores the ways in which botanical and ecological knowledge can be and are being maintained as living adaptive systems that promote healthy cultures, environments, and Indigenous plant populations.

Ancient Pathways, Ancestral Knowledge both challenges and contributes to existing knowledge of Indigenous peoples' land stewardship while preserving information that might otherwise have been lost. Providing new and captivating insights into the anthropogenic systems of northwestern North

America it will stand as an authoritative reference work and contribute to a fuller understanding of the interactions between cultures and ecological systems Northwest Anthropological Research Notes Roderick Sprague, Deward E. economic efficiency given the evidence for economic independence among household members social and political motivations like elite competition for followers warfare related concerns and the need to symbolize and strengthen social bonds in eastern Aleut villages likely factored into their decision to live in multifamily houses The second dissertation issue centers on the relationships between house lineage size and economic activities wealth and status These relationships are explored through the comparative analyses of assemblages recovered from small medium and large houses The Agayadan villagers organized their houses in a similar fashion regardless of size Each excavated house contained the same aggregate of facilities workshops and family compartments The largest house however had the highest frequency of personal adornment objects which is consistent with the ethnohistoric observation that a household's status was based on its size The occupants of the largest house were also more involved in accumulating surpluses as indicated by the abundance of salmon remains and storage facilities Finally the larger household emphasized the production of prestige goods from locally available materials like ivory limestone and animal skins presumably for exchange outside the village The amber beads slate knives obsidian bifaces and other exotic goods received in return were widely distributed within the community and not hoarded by Agayadan's high status household These behaviors are consistent with a social banker strategy where elite lineages compete for status by working harder P3 producing an excess of foods and materials which they then use in alliance building feasting and celebrations in a social display of their power and prestige Agayadan's large household maintained their power and status by controlling prestige goods production and redistributing valuable exotics not by controlling subsistence resources and exploiting low status households The Agayadan archaeological record is an outstanding example of transegalitarian elites converting their labor and material wealth into social capital and political power In a real sense Agayadan's elite manufactured their prestige Leaves i iii Northwest Anthropological Research Notes, 2001 Vol 2 no 1 includes Papers presented at the first twenty annual meetings of the Northwest Anthropological Conference 1948 1967 Journal of Northwest Anthropology, 2002 The SAA Archaeological Record, 2008 The magazine of the Society for American Archaeology The Last Hunter-gatherers in the Near East Christophe Delage, 2004 This volume gathers papers on the Natufian and other contemporary Late Epipaleolithic cultures in Southwest Asia It offers general reflections on the interpretative potential of data gathered in past studies exploring theoretical issues concerning the position of the Natufian at the Pleistocene Holocene transition and the beginning of the food production process from more critical viewpoints and different angles Settlement patterns mobility patterns of natural resources exploitation the place of the Natufian in the process toward food production the complexity of its social organization between nomadic Epipaleolithic bands of hunter gatherers and sedentary farming Neolithic societies are the main issues and topics addressed in this book In this sense site and fieldwork reports have a limited space in this collection of essays It has instead a clear theoretical orientation with mainly critical discussions and interpretations of current available data Antiquity Osbert Guy Stanhope Crawford, 2003
