

I've Never Been

I've never been a soldier or fought in a war
And though from my old Hometown I have travelled far
I have never grown wealthy and never known fame
And I feel happy that few even know me by name.

I've never been anyway useful at sport
At football or golf or on the tennis court
Some call me a loser those with words who are cruel
In the age of aggression the most aggressive rule.

Though some of the big World out there I have seen
A God fearing person I never have been
Of the one known as God only good things we hear
And if god is all good then him why should we fear?

Though I have travelled far from my old native home
I have never been to the Coliseum in Rome
Or been to the Pyramids or seen China's great Wall
In the future such memories I won't have to recall.

I have never been good at any one thing
And others my praises they never will sing
The hard roads of life I have walked up and down
And I live many miles from my northern Hometown.

Conversations with Texas Writers Frances Leonard,Ramona Cearley,2005-03 Larry McMurtry declares Texas itself doesn t have anything to do with why I write It never did Horton Foote on the other hand says I ve just never had a desire to write about any place else In between those figurative bookends are hundreds of other writers some internationally recognized others just becoming known who draw inspiration and often subject matter from the unique places and people that are Texas To give everyone who is interested in Texas writing a representative sampling of the breadth and vitality of the state's current literary production this volume features conversations with fifty of Texas's most notable established writers and emerging talents. The writers included here work in a wide variety of genres: novels, short stories, poetry, plays, screenplays, essays, nonfiction, and magazine journalism. In their conversations with interviewers from the Writers League of Texas and other authors' organizations, the writers speak of their apprenticeships, literary influences, working habits, connections with their readers, and the domestic and public events that have shaped their writing. Accompanying the interviews are excerpts from the writers' work as well as their photographs, biographies, and bibliographies. Joe Holley's introductory essay, an overview of Texas writing from Cabeza de Vaca's 1542 Relaci3n to the work of today's generation of writers who are equally at home in Hollywood as in Texas, provides the necessary context to appreciate such a diverse collection of literary voices.

A sampling from the book: This land has been my subject matter. One thing that distinguishes me from the true naturalist is that I've never been able to look at land without thinking of the people who've been on it. It's fundamental to me. John Graves: Writing is a way to keep ourselves more in touch with everything we experience. It seems the best gifts and thoughts are given to us when we pause, take a deep breath, look around, see what's there, and return to where we were revived. Naomi Shihab Nye: I've said this many times in print: the novel is the middle age genre. Very few people have written really good novels when they are young, and few people have written really good novels when they are old. You just tail off and lose a certain level of concentration. Your imaginative energy begins to lag. I feel like I'm repeating myself, and most writers do repeat themselves. Larry McMurtry: I was a pretty poor cowhand. I grew up on the Macaraw Ranch east of Crane, Texas. My father tried very hard to make a cowboy out of me, but in my case it never seemed to work too well. I had more of a literary bent. I loved to read, and very early on I began to write small stories, short stories out of the things I liked to read. Elmer Kelton Sessional Papers Canada. Parliament, 1899.
