 of This Letter* Mindy J. Morgan,2009-11 The Bearer of This Letter illuminates the enduring effects of colonialism by examining the decades long tension between written words and spoken words in a reservation community Drawing on archival sources and her own extensive work in the community Mindy J Morgan investigates how historical understandings of literacy practices challenge current Indigenous language revitalization efforts on the Fort Belknap Reservation in Montana Created in 1887 Fort Belknap is home to the Gros Ventre and Assiniboiné peoples The history of these two peoples over the past century is a common one among Indigenous groups with religious and federal authorities aggressively promoting the use of English at the expense of the local Indigenous languages Morgan suggests that such efforts at the assimilation of Indigenous peoples had a far reaching and not fully appreciated consequence Through a close reading of federal local and missionary records at Fort Belknap Morgan demonstrates how the government used documents as a means of restructuring political and social life as well as regulating access to resources during the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries As a result the residents of Fort Belknap began to use written English as a means of negotiating with the government and when arguing for structural change during the early reservation period while maintaining distinct arenas for Indigenous language use These linguistic practices have significantly shaped the community's perceptions of the utility of writing and continue to play a central role in contemporary language programs that increasingly rely on standardized orthographies for Indigenous language programs Lakota Bruce Ingham,2003 Language George Melville Bolling,Bernard Bloch,2000
