Reading Black Reading Feminist:

Reading Black, Reading Feminist Henry Louis Gates, Henry Louis Gates (Jr.), 1990-10-30 Black women's writing has finally emerged as one of the most dynamic fields of American literature. This unique and comprehensive collection of 26 literary essays provides real evidence of a rich cultural history of black women in America. Here leading literary critics both male and female black and white look at fiction, nonfiction, poetry, slave narratives, and autobiographies in a totally new way. In essence, they reconstruct a literary history that documents black women as artists, intellectuals, symbol makers, teachers, survivors. Henry Louis Gates Jr., the editor of this anthology and a noted authority on African American literature, has provided a thought-provoking introduction that celebrates the experience of reading black reading feminist. A penetrating look at women's writing from a unique perspective, this superb collection brings to light the rich heritage of literary creativity among African American women. Back cover

Black Feminist Anthropology Irma McClaurin, 2001 In the discipline's early days, anthropologists, by definition, were assumed to be white and male. Women and black scholars were relegated to the field's periphery. From this marginal place, white feminist anthropologists have successfully carved out an acknowledged intellectual space identified as feminist anthropology. Unfortunately, the works of black and non-western feminist anthropologists are rarely cited, and they have yet to be respected as significant shapers of the direction and transformation of feminist anthropology. In this volume, Irma McClaurin has collected for the first time essays that explore the role and contributions of black feminist anthropologists. She has asked her contributors to disclose how their experiences as black women have influenced their anthropological practice in Africa, the Caribbean, and the United States, and how anthropology has influenced their development as black feminists. Every chapter is a unique journey that enables the reader to see how scholars are made. The writers present material from their own fieldwork to demonstrate how these experiences were shaped by their identities. Finally, each essay suggests how the author's field experiences have influenced the theoretical and methodological choices she has made throughout her career. Not since Diane Wolf's Feminist Dilemmas in the Field or Hortense Powdermaker's Stranger and Friend have we had such a breadth of women anthropologists discussing the critical and personal issues that emerge when doing ethnographic research.

A Readers Guide to Contemporary Feminist Literary Criticism Maggie Humm, 2015-07-17 This introduction to feminist literary criticism in its international contexts discusses a broad range of complex critical writings and then identifies and explains the main developments and debates within each approach. Each chapter has an easy-to-use format comprising an introductory overview, an explanation of key themes and techniques, a detailed account of the work of specific critics, and a summary which includes critiques of the approach. Each chapter is accompanied by a guide to the primary texts and further reading.

as well as the work of other women who have created ongoing organizations for the express purpose of bringing excluded groups into voice. Because these organizations are so effective in nurturing the development of their members, the authors call them public homeplaces. While these diverse projects are rooted in very different soils—declining inner city neighborhoods, affluent middle class suburbs, and African American communities in the Deep South—they have much in common. They are places where every voice is heard, where the group's action projects are designed to address the members' most driving questions and concerns, and where all are supported to be the best they can be.
