Private Sector And Power Generation In China:

The Private Sector and Power Generation in China, 2000-01-01 the Chinese government remains aware of the potential threats to the economy foreign capital flight loss of competitiveness drop in consumers confidence etc and is striving to continue to provide a stable environment for domestic investment and household consumption to maintain growth Since the early 1980s the Chinese Government has eased restrictions on the power industry and ensured private participation in power sector development In the aftermath of the Asian economic and financial crisis concerns are being raised about Chinese currency Renminbi devaluation and the impact of the slowdown of electricity growth on the implementation of past contracts and new investment opportunities To address these concerns China's Ministry of Finance and the World Bank sponsored a two day conference held in Beijing June 22 23 1999 The conference aimed to improve understanding and narrow the gap in perceptions of risks related to project development among government officials representatives of provincial power companies and financial institutions and private investors The first part of this publication is dedicated to the narrative summary of the conference The second part presents a background paper prepared for the conference to take stock of the progress achieved and identify issues and problems that still need to be addressed to create an environment conducive to further private involvement in power sector development This publication will be useful to the international community that is interested in past and future development of private sector involvement in China's power sector such as Chinese government officials power companies private financial institutions and private investors

The Private Sector and Power Generation in China, 2000 Managing China's Energy Sector Hongyi Lai, Malcolm Warner, 2017-10-02 Since China has now become the world's largest energy consumer its energy sector has understandably huge implications for the global economy This book examines the transformation of China's conventional and renewable energy sectors with special attention to state business relations Two studies examine the development of China's energy profile especially China's renewable energy Two others explore governmental relations with state owned enterprises SOEs and their reform Despite drastic restructuring in the late 1990s SOEs continue their oligopolistic control of the oil and gas sectors and even overshadow the stock market Three studies investigate the factors that help propel the expansion of China's conventional energy firms as well as those producing renewable energy i.e solar PV industry A study of China's solar PV industry suggests that China's governmental support for it has evolved from subsidising production a mercantile stage aimed at expanding the industry's global production and export share to subsidising the demand side aiming at expanding domestic demand and absorbing redundant manufacture capacity Another review of this industry finds that firms tend to pay heavy attention to extra firm institutional network relationships both inside and outside China and that buyer supplier networks are influenced by extra local managerial education The final chapter compares China's provinces and their embedded carbon footprints per capita in urban areas from a consumption perspective using a self organizing feature map SOFM model This book was originally published as a special issue of the Asia Pacific Business Review China's Low-Carbon Energy Relations with Emerging Markets Ryan McLean, 2025-09-30 This book explores China's contemporary energy relations with emerging markets Through the prisms of global low carbon transition and power sector development Ryan McLean utilises the multi level perspective to build upon existing understandings of the Chinese renewables revolution from a top down interpretation McLean presents an in depth analysis of the external ramifications of China's solar and wind dominance across the Global South in the areas of green technological trade project construction and regime financing This research provides a convincing explanation for why Chinese coal incumbents have been proactive overseas in spite of the country's clean energy dominance and Beijing's climate commitments Finally the book argues that China's low carbon prowess has longer term significance for the Global South and in addition contributes to the rising debates over the geopolitics of renewable transition in a complex multipolar world This volume will be of great interest to students and scholars of Chinese energy policy and foreign relations energy markets in the Global South international politics and the wider global energy transition field

Energy Information Administration, 1996 Renewable Energy in East Asia Christopher M. Dent, 2014-11-27 Energy is crucial to the functioning of any human society and central to understanding East Asia's economic miracle The region's rapid development over the last few decades has been inherently energy intensive and the impact on global energy security climate change and the twenty first century global system generally is now very significant and will become more so over foreseeable years and decades to come The region is already the world's largest energy consumer and greenhouse gas emitter so establishing cleaner energy systems in East Asia is both a regional and global challenge and renewable energy has a critically important part to play in meeting it This book presents a comprehensive study of renewable energy development in East Asia It begins by examining renewable energy development in global and historic contexts and situates East Asia s position in the recent worldwide expansion of renewables This same approach is applied on sector specific chapter studies on wind solar hydropower geothermal ocean wave and tidal and bioenergy and to general trends in renewable energy policy Governments play a critical role in promoting renewables and their contribution to tackling climate change and other environmental challenges Christopher M Dent argues this is particularly relevant to East Asia where state capacity practice has been increasingly allied to ecological modernisation thinking to form what he calls new developmentalism the principal foundation on which renewables have developed in the region as well as how East Asia s low carbon development is being generally promoted Renewable Energy in East Asia will be of huge interest to students and scholars of Asian studies economics political economy energy studies business development international relations and environmental studies It will also appeal to researchers working on the subject matter in government business international organisations think tanks and civil society organisations

Ahmed,2006-12-21 With real case stories Wells and Ahmed bring to life both the hopes for and the failures of international guarantees of property rights for investors in the developing world Their cases focus on infrastructure projects but the lessons apply equally to many other investments In the 1990 s inexperienced firms from rich countries jumped directly into huge projects in some of the world s least developed countries Their investments reflected almost unbridled enthusiasm for emerging markets and trust in new international guarantees Yet within a few years the business pages of the world press were reporting an exploding number of serious disputes between foreign investors and governments As the expected bonanzas proved elusive and the protections weaker than anticipated many foreign investors became disenchanted with emerging markets So bad were the outcomes in some cases that a few notable infrastructure firms came close to bankruptcy several others hurriedly fled poor countries as projects soured In this book Louis Wells and Rafiq Ahmed show why disputes developed point out how investments and disputes have changed over time explore why various firms responded differently to crises and question the basic wisdom of some of the enthusiasm for privatization The authors tell how firms countries and multilateral development organizations can build a conflict management system that balances the legitimate economic and social concerns of the host countries and those of investors Without these changes multinational corporations will lose profitable opportunities and poor countries will not gain the contributions that foreign investment can make toward alleviating poverty
