

TODD SHIPYARDS CORPORATION
SEATTLE DIVISION
HISTORY AND EXPERIENCE

GENERAL

Todd Shipyards Corporation, incorporated in 1916, is one of the world's largest privately-owned shipbuilding, repair, conversion and industrial organizations. The company operates an integrated complex of eight modern self-contained shipyards and industrial facilities, strategically located in the principal port cities on the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts of the United States. Headquarters are located at One Broadway, New York City.

Following World War II, the greatly expanded operations of the company emphasized a policy of wide diversification. The traditional ship repair and shipbuilding activities of Todd Shipyards Corporation continue at increased tempo, complemented by a wide scope of work, embracing the construction of barges and towboats, industrial fabrication and manufactured products. In this age of scientific advancement, Todd Shipyards Corporation's program of diversification includes research, development, design and engineering in the rapidly growing fields of atomic energy, manufacturing and custom industrial fabrication.

During World War II, Todd Shipyards Corporation repaired, converted and built 117,535, 216 tons of shipping between December 1941 and August 1945. This amazing record, second to none, included work on a total of 23,456 ships of more than 40 types in the several Todd Shipyards. Contributing vitally to this record was the construction of new ships by the subsidiary yards established at Seattle and Tacoma. These shipyards were operated under the name of Seattle-Tacoma Shipbuilding Corporation, later changed to Todd Pacific Shipyards, Inc. During the period 1940-1945, the Seattle shipbuilding yard built 45 destroyers for the U. S. Navy. In the same period, the Tacoma yard built a total of 73 vessels, including 5 cargo vessels, 2 troop transports and 36 aircraft carriers.

SEATTLE DIVISION

The Seattle Division of today traces its beginning to the shipbuilding and repair yard founded in 1900 by Moran Brothers. Reorganized in 1911, the Moran yard was thereafter known as the Seattle Construction & Dry Dock Co. until 1916 when it was purchased by the William H. Todd Corporation. Engaged in building cargo vessels for the U. S. Shipping Board, that yard was operated as a subsidiary of Todd Shipyards Corporation until sold in 1918. In the same year, Todd interests formed a new company, known as Todd Dry Docks, Inc., and located at the present site on Harbor Island. Todd Dry Docks, Inc., a Washington corporation, was operated as a wholly-owned subsidiary until 1943, when it was taken over by the parent company, and has since been conducted as the Seattle Division of Todd Shipyards Corporation.

Located at the northwest corner of Harbor Island, the Seattle Division embraces 30 acres of land and water on Elliott Bay, Seattle's harbor. The yard has seven piers affording over 4300 linear feet for ship berthing, served by seven whirley-type traveling cranes. It has four floating drydocks, with lifting capacities ranging from 5,800 to 20,000 tons, the largest accommodating vessels to 650 feet in length. A shipbuilding way for the construction of vessels to a length of 535 feet, is an important unit of the plant's facilities.

In addition to its major repair and conversion activities, the Seattle Division resumed new vessel construction in 1952 and is currently engaged in building four guided missile destroyers for the U. S. Navy. This program will continue until 1964. Typical of the scope and variety of projects handled by this division, during the same period a 168" diameter butterfly valve for the Boulder Canyon Power Plant, twelve 38" by 50" Tainter type crest gates, and a steel floating caisson 60' wide and 70' high for the Rocky Reach Dam on the Columbia River were constructed. Fabrication of atomic reactor components, practice missiles, and hydraulic elevators are all being undertaken by Todds Seattle Division.
