FIVE SENSES READING COMPREHENSION Reading

Read the first three of Reading Comprehension Book 1.

Remember: The five senses – sight, touch, taste, smell, and sound – are essential for understanding the world around us. They help us learn about our environment, communicate with others, and experience the joy and wonder of life.

Figure 1: Light enters the eye through the cornea, passes through the lens, and is focused on the retina. The retina sends signals to the brain, which interprets the information as sight.

Figure 2: Sound waves enter the ear through the ear canal, hit the eardrum, and cause it to vibrate. These vibrations are passed to the ossicles, which amplify the sound and send it to the cochlea, where it is converted into electrical signals that the brain can understand.

Figure 3: Taste buds on the tongue are responsible for detecting the five basic tastes: sweet, salty, sour, bitter, and umami. These tastes help us know if food is good or bad for us.

Figure 4: The nose is responsible for detecting smells. Scents enter the nose through the nostrils and are carried by mucus to the olfactory receptors, which send signals to the brain.

Figure 5: The skin is covered with millions of nerve endings that detect touch, pressure, temperature, and pain. These sensations help us know what is happening around us and protect us from harm.
