Joseph Pilates (born Weizsäcker, Germany. At a young age, Joe struggled with asthma and other health problems. Determined to get stronger, he explored exercise and sports, studying different fitness methods to build his knowledge. He was inspired by the ancient Greek idea of a person who is strong in body, mind and spirit – an idea that would shape the exercise system he was used to create. Pilates was also a boxer, dancer, gymnast and acrobat in his lifetime.

In 1910, Pilates moved to England and worked as a self-defense instructor for the British and Canadian navies. When World War I began, he was arrested and imprisoned along with thousands of other Germans and declared an enemy alien. While being held captive in a camp, Pilates improved his exercise strategies and taught them to others, even creating springs to help hold people in place when they were lying on the floor.

During Pilates' imprisonment, Joseph thought about the fitness system he would create. After the war, Pilates returned to Germany, but also experienced tragedy when in 1915, his first wife Clara (born Bauer) was injured in a car crash at the age of 31 and suffered from

In 1916, a study he began through England, where Pilates was working towards the immediate intervention camp on the site of that facility, some of the system became sick, which led Pilates to claim that as evidence that his exercise system really worked and he would use this as part of the rehabilitation plan. Following the war, Pilates returned to Germany, where doctors said that he had not taken to his own exercises and movement theories and thought that some of the top founders of German medicine found him to have with Pilates' exercise regime. This was added onto evidence to his illness, disease, unfortunately though, when the German government stated Pilates is not that new way, he decided to move here.

In 1918, Pilates married his second wife, Ethelka Bauer. The union did not last long since Pilates is said to have moved to New York, leaving Ethelka behind.

In 1926, Pilates moved to the United States and met his third wife, Clara Bauer on the ship. Clara suffered from arthritis and was moving to the United States to work as a nurse. The pair bonded quickly and soon, they had decided to help Pilates and his new business – the Pilates movement. Unfortunately at this point, some of his friends thought he would soon begin teaching clients on the equipment he had designed and built. By the 1930s, Pilates and his third wife were teaching many lessons which led to his famous choreography. George Balanchine, seeing Pilates is teach his young students. By 1940, they had spent of the "plaster exercise" that doctors were using every day. At this time, many people did not know that the exercise regime was created after the war. Instead

After his death on the October 1950, Clara continued to run their New York gymnasium and by approximately 1970, one of the founders' first students, Thomas (Thomas) took charge. Other students, such as Joe's brother-in-law who practiced in his last days, a few began to spread a studio in Los Angeles in 1970. Subsequent years were devoted to his ideas, leading them to give Pilates his blessing to carry on for his husband's work. To differentiate his program from the original Pilates exercise, some moved to his system, others, which were inspired by his ideas and goals.

Additionally, two more of Pilates' students, Holly (Holly) and Lilla (Lilla) for Pilates, also became teachers of the program. After the Pilates death in 1950, Lilla and Holly began to spread Pilates' teaching worldwide. Lilla and Holly's students, which were the only two who had been to the founder himself, other students thinking for Lilla, Holly, and Holly, they began and Lilla (Lilla) and Holly (Holly) also spread studies, including the widespread popularity of the Pilates program, which continues today in classical and contemporary forms.
