

The village of Cressage has a pub (The Eagle), and it is claimed that the Pope's emissary St Augustine preached to the Welsh bishops in 4584 under the Cressage Oak (originally Christ's Oak, from which the village name derives, which stood for centuries on the site now occupied by the war memorial).

At the war memorial, turn left onto Sherston Road, walking for some distance to reach the village of Sherston. In the Domesday Book it is called Schentune or Scortune, and was held by Ralph de Mortimer. Pass Sherston church of St Peter and St Paul, a Grade II listed building, perched above the road. The earliest parts of the church date from the 14th century. However, most of what survives today dates from Victorian times, when much of the church was rebuilt.

Climb steadily eastwards out of the village. Almost Ten (about half a mile) further on, as the road levels and then bends gently to the right, leave it by branching left down a surfaced driveway to Bulkeley Park. Just on reaching a house, leave the driveway and cross a stile, descending into the delightful broadleaved woodland of Pine's Coppice. At the end of the woodland, the path runs out into an ascending track past Park
