The Physiological Mechanisms of Motivation D.W. Pfaff, 2012-12-06. To scientists engaged in research on the cellular mechanisms in the mammalian brain, concepts of motivation seem to be a logical necessity even if they are not fashionable. Immersed in the detailed time-consuming research required to deal with mammalian nerve cells, we usually pay scant attention to the more global brain-behavior questions that have arisen from decades of biological and psychological studies. We felt it was time to confront these issues, namely how far has neurobiological investigation come in uncovering mechanisms by which motivational signals influence behavior. At Rockefeller University, we have recently held a course on this subject. We restricted our treatment to those motivational systems most tractable to physiological approaches and invited scientists skilled in both behavioral issues and physiological techniques to participate. This volume results from that course. The deans and administration at Rockefeller University provided much help in planning the course, and the staff of Springer Verlag assisted in planning the book. Gabriele Zumberg helped organize both the course and the processing of book chapters. They all deserve our thanks. December 1981. Donald W. Pfaff, Professor of Neurobiology and Behavior, Rockefeller University.
