Phytochemical Effects Of Environmental Compounds:

Phytochemical Effects of Environmental Compounds James A. Saunders, Lynn Kosak-Channing, Eric E. Conn, 2012-12-06
The influence of compounds in the environment on the chemistry of plants is a topic which has economic and scientific implications of global importance. Selected presentations in this symposium covered several topics within this immense field inclusive of air, soil, and aquatic sources of the compounds. As demonstrated in Chapter 4 by O. Keeffe et al, we have not restricted the discussion solely to negative aspects of anthropogenic compounds. Nor could we begin to cover comprehensively all major classes of environmental compounds in the air, soil, or water that may have an effect on the phytochemistry of plants. Our intent was to focus on some of the timely and well publicized environmental constituents such as ozone, sulfur dioxide, acid rain, and others to provide an authoritative publication specifically related to environmental modifications of plant chemistry. The concept of this symposium originated with the Executive Committee of the Phytochemical Society of North America in 1983. It was brought to fruition during July 13-17, 1986, on the campus of the University of Maryland at the annual meeting of the PSNA through the efforts of the Symposium Committee composed of James A. Saunders and Lynn Kosak-Channing. Financial support for this meeting was provided by the Phytochemical Society of North America as well as by generous contributions from E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The Organizing Committee consisting of J. A. Saunders, Chair; J. M. Gillespie, L. Kosak-Channing, E. H. Lee, J. P. The Formation, Structure and Activity of Phytochemicals Reinhard Jetter, 2015-09-29. This text provides both review and primary research articles for a broad audience of biologists, chemists, biochemists, pharmacologists, clinicians, and nutrition experts, especially those interested in the biosynthesis, structure, function, and/or bioactivity of plant natural products. Recurring themes include the evolution and ecology of specialized metabolites, the genetic and enzymatic mechanisms for their formation and metabolism, the systems biology study of their cell, tissue, organ, context, the engineering of plant natural products as well as various aspects of their application for human health. In addition to analysis of current research, new developments in the techniques used to study plant natural products are presented and discussed, taking a detailed look at structure elucidation and quantification, omic, genomic, proteomic, transcriptomic, metabolomics, profiling, or for microscopic localization. In short, this series combines chapters from researchers that explain and discuss current topics in the most exciting new research in phytochemistry. Air Pollution Effects on Crops and Forests, January 1984 - December 1989 Jane Potter Gates, 1990. Effects of Ozone on Plants Kathie Beane, 1993. Phytochemical Effects of Environmental Compounds J.A. Air Pollution Mohammed Yunus, Muhammad Iqbal, 1996-09-10 Air pollution poses a serious threat to human health and the environment worldwide It contributes significantly to regional and global atmospheric issues such as global warming acidification and depletion of the ozone layer It affects every living thing including all kinds of vegetation on which we depend for our survival Although several works have appeared on air pollution few are able to provide the broad background that encompasses the whole gamut of plant responses to atmospheric insult This multi authored work integrates the varied plant growth responses to the pollution stress the focus of the attention is plant rather than pollutant This portrays a clearer picture of plant performance versus air pollution and helps develop a better insight of the pollution based disturbances at the different levels of plant life The book shall interest both students and researchers of environmental botany and forestry as well as all those who love plants and have any interest towards global vegetation and environmental health
