Preventing Occupational Exposures:

Preventing Occupational Exposures to Infectious Disease in Health Care Amber Hogan Mitchell, 2020-09-22 This book is a practical guide for preventing occupational exposures to bloodborne and infectious disease in health care. It is a timely and essential resource given that people working in healthcare settings sustain a higher incidence of occupational illness than any other industry sector and at the time of publication of this book we are in the midst of a global pandemic of COVID 19. While the guide is focused on health care primarily, it would be useful for preventing exposures to essential workers in many other industries as well. The guide offers easy-to-follow instructions all in one place for creating, implementing, and evaluating occupational health and safety programs. Readers have practical information that they can use now to either build a new program or expand an existing one that protects workers from occupationally associated illness and infection. With a focus on the public health significance of building better, safer programs in health care, the book provides not just the evidence-based or data-driven reasoning behind building successful programs but also includes sample programs, plans, checklists, campaigns, and record-keeping and surveillance tools. Topics explored among the chapters include Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) Regulatory Compliance, Other Regulatory Requirements, National Standards and Accreditation, Performing a Hazard Assessment, and Building an Exposure Control Plan, Engineering Controls, and Safer Medical Devices, Personal Protective Equipment Placement and Use, Facing a Modern Pandemic, Preventing Occupational Exposures to Infectious Disease in Health Care. This is a comprehensive resource for both seasoned and novice professionals with primary, secondary, or ancillary responsibility for occupational or employee health and safety, infection prevention, risk management, or environmental health and safety in a variety of healthcare or patient care settings. It also would appeal to those working in public health, nursing, medical or clinical technical trades with an interest in infection prevention and control, and/or occupational health and infectious disease.

NIOSH Alert National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (U.S.), 2004. Recent evidence in the Alert summarized on this poster documents that worker exposure to hazardous drugs is a persistent problem. Although most air sampling studies have not demonstrated significant airborne concentrations of these drugs, the sampling methods used in the past have come into question. Larson et al. (2003) and may not be a good indicator of contamination in the workplace. In all studies involving examination of surface wipe samples, researchers have determined that surface contamination of the workplace is common and widespread. Also, a number of recent studies have documented the excretion of several indicator drugs in the urine of health care workers. Results from studies indicate that worker exposure to hazardous drugs in health care facilities may result in adverse health effects. Appropriately designed studies have begun and are continuing to characterize the extent and nature of health hazards associated with these ongoing exposures. NIOSH is currently conducting studies to further identify potential sources of exposure and methods to reduce or eliminate worker exposure to these drugs. To minimize these potentially acute short term and chronic long term effects of exposure to hazardous drugs at work NIOSH recommends that at a minimum employers and health care workers follow the recommendations presented in this Alert NOISTIC 2

Preventing Occupational Exposures to Antineoplastic and Other Hazardous Drugs I National Institute Safety and Health, 2015-03-13 The adverse health effects associated with antineoplastic agents cancer chemotherapy drugs cytotoxic drugs in cancer patients and some non cancer patients treated with these drugs are well documented. The very nature of antineoplastic agents makes them harmful to healthy cells and tissues as well as the cancerous cells. For cancer patients with a life-threatening disease, there is certainly a great benefit to treatment with these agents. However, for the health care workers who are exposed to antineoplastic agents as part of their work practice, precautions should be taken to eliminate or reduce exposure as much as possible. Pharmacists who prepare these drugs or nurses who may prepare and/or administer them are the two occupational groups who have the highest potential exposure to antineoplastic agents. Additionally, physicians and operating room personnel may also be exposed through the treatment of patients. Hospital staff such as shipping and receiving personnel, custodial workers, laundry workers, and waste handlers all have potential exposure to these drugs during the course of their work. The increased use of antineoplastic agents in veterinary oncology also puts these workers at risk for exposure to these drugs.
