

Roscoe's Rules of Thumb for Determining Sample Size

- Sample sizes larger than 30 and smaller than 500 are appropriate for most research
- Minimum sample size of 30 for each subcategory is usually necessary
- In multivariate research, the sample size should be several times as large as the number of variables in the study
- For simple experimental research, successful research is possible with samples as small as 10 to 20

Research in Health Care Settings Kathleen E. Grady,Barbara Strudler Wallston,1988-06 This is the first volume to focus on a substantive area of research rather than on a particular method It describes the whole process of research from setting up and conducting the project to interpreting and publishing results Much current research is cited in this very useful American volume Journal of the Institute of Health Education Veteran and neophyte researchers will find this book extremely valuable Kathleen E Grady and Barbara Strudler Wallston simplify potentially complex and boring material and can be used as a quick reference Combining an easily readable style breezy approach and technical insights makes Research in Health Care Settings an excellent contribution to the libraries of all social scientists Evaluation Practice An individual s behavior and lifestyle are critical factors for preventing and managing diseases Social scientists and health professionals are increasingly studying the behavior health link in the new areas of behavior medicine and health psychology Research in Health Care Settings is the first book to review social science research methods used in health care settings This important work speaks both to health care professionals conducting behavioral research and social scientists doing research in health care settings It provides social scientists with a better understanding of health settings and health care professionals with better training in social science methodology This careful step by step guide to designing and carrying out a study in behavioral medicine is loaded with real life examples from health care settings It reflects the needs of interdisciplinary research projects not idealized research situations A useful guide for students of research methods in medical and allied health programs and for health professionals and social scientists studying the behavior health link

Canadian Journal of Forest Research ,2001 Policy Research and the Policy Process James L. Garrett,1998 In a time of tight government budgets donors and clients want to know whether the research they fund makes any difference to public policy choices and ultimately to people s live Yet the methodologies for evaluating the impact of social science research on policy choices and policy outcomes are not well developed The complexity of the policy process and the general nature of much policy research makes it difficult to attribute policy decisions or policy outcomes to specific research findings This paper contributes to the development of these methodologies by first summarizing what we know about the policy process and the use of information in policymaking and then relying on that review to suggest ways to assess the impact of research on policymaking JMR, Journal of Marketing Research ,1997 Rules of Thumb Jay Silverman,1999-01-01
