Place Marketing:

Place Marketing and Temporality Gary Warnaby, 2024-06-26 Much city marketing and branding activity is future oriented aimed at achieving a forward looking vision for places The aim of this activity is to attract visitors residents and or inward investment and focus on communicating attractive place attributes to create a differentiated spatial product that will appeal to particular target audiences In seeking to achieve this place marketing campaigns have been criticized for emphasizing generic attributes such as accessibility infrastructure and a skilled workforce which can serve to homogenize places which in reality are very different However a city s distinctive character is a consequence of its history and development over time and this book analyses the role of these temporal dimensions in place marketing and branding The book analyses how the past both material i e the historic built environment and intangible i e routines practices and the character of the populace is appropriated in order to sell the city into the future It acknowledges the inherent selectivity involved and discusses the factors influencing what is remembered from the past and equally importantly what is forgotten Adopting a range of theoretical approaches to understanding temporality in this context the book will appeal to advanced students academic researchers and reflexive place branding practitioners by introducing a temporal paradox incorporating both fixity the material and immaterial elements of the city s past and fluidity relating to the creation of the place product as a dynamic assemblage of individual elements and attributes aimed at particular target audiences Selling the Business Location:

Place Marketing in the context of the Rhine-Main Region Christiane Mohr, 2013-06-01 In the past decade place marketing country marketing and city marketing have enjoyed an increase in recognition especially as countries and locations have been spending more money to encourage firms to locate their offices and plant locations in the place marketer s area This is reflected in a growing number of associations literature media coverage and educational courses offered The aim of the present study is to evaluate current literature in order to understand the importance of place marketing in general and marketing of the Rhine Main Region as Germany s most cosmopolitan region in particular For an international context Hong Kong and Los Angeles are used as exemplary competitors For Los Angeles is one of the United States most powerful cities and Hong Kong represents the gateway to China However the focus of the investigation is on a B2B perspective in the marketing of the Rhine Main Region In literature and in practice place marketing strategies vary from very simple to very sophisticated After the creation of a theoretical framework in which the author examines place marketing from the perspective of the marketer and that of the business customer the author puts the whole set into practice with help of the Rhine Main Region Los Angeles and Hong Kong In the final conclusion she assesses the place marketing activities of the aforementioned competitors and tries to rank them according to their current performance Library of Congress

Place Marketing Gregory Ashworth, Piet Pellenbarg, Henry Voogd, 2009-08 Changes in the nature of cities the behaviour and expectations of citizens and the philosophies of governance have encouraged radical change in the way places are planned and managed Among these reactions is the systematic and widespread incorporation of aspects of marketing within place management in public sector organizations Focusing on public sector planning and management with its distinctive issues and objectives principally at urban and regional scales this book examines the uses and misuses of marketing techniques as place management tools and investigates the advantages and disadvantages of integrating market planning approaches within public sector place planning and management Ashworth Pellenbarg and Voogd cite cases of successful and unsuccessful practice from across the globe and provide a long awaited critical synthesis of a voluminous and fragmented literature Combined this leads to the development of practice from theory and the creation of theory from practice
