Rural Water Supply and Sanitation Forrest Blythe Wright, 1939      Rural Water Supply and Sanitation DANIDA., 1999

This report on India's rural water supply and sanitation points out that India has achieved considerable success in providing safe drinking water to about 85% of her rural population by tapping ground and surface water through 3 million hand pumps thousands of water supply schemes and traditional sources. Despite the impressive coverage of provision of safe drinking water facilities in the rural areas there are certain areas of serious concern. The issue of sustainability and maintenance of quality of water supplied are cited as the two major constraints in achieving the avowed objectives. In the years to come the rural water supply program is sure to have serious challenges by way of meeting the expanding needs of a fast growing population as well as the increasing demand of the population for higher service levels. The adoption of the demand driven approach replacing the present supply focused approach is a pre requisite for evolving suitable cost sharing practices with active participation of the stakeholders. In this background the report on the rural water supply and sanitation by the World Bank as part of the Water Resources Management Work dwells on the policy and constraint of this sector as well as on institutional and financial issues related to the sector reform process and advocates an approach to bring about radical reforms in the sector.

Rural Water Supplies and Sanitation Peter Morgan, 1990. The Blair Research Bulletins are already established the world over as leading documents in the complex issue of water supply building maintaining and producing quality water supply whilst giving priority to the safety standards and hygienic control of the water. This book brings together many of these bulletins as a filed manual with improved illustrative material and the most modern refinements to techniques and ideas.

Rural Water Supply and Sanitation, 1999 South Asia Rural Development Series

Since the inception of the Sixth Five Year Plan 1980-85 and the launch of the International Drinking Water Supply and Sanitation Decade India has substantially increased its commitment to the water supply and sanitation sector. Sector investments have increased and presently make up about 3 percent of the national budget. Rural Water Supply and Sanitation discusses issues such as protection of water sources institutional performance and sector reform strategy.

Guidelines for the Development of Small-Scale Rural Water Supply and Sanitation Projects in East Africa Dennis B. Warner, Carmela Green Abate, 2005-09-21. This document constitutes general technical guidelines for the planning and implementation of small scale water supply and sanitation activities in rural East Africa which includes both projects funded under the USAID Title II Food for Peace Program and projects funded by other donors. It is intended to assist Catholic Relief Services and its partners in improving the effectiveness environmental protection and long term sustainability of water and sanitation activities in the rural and often food insecure areas of East Africa.

Rural Communities John Briscoe, David M. De Ferranti, 1988 Efforts to improve the water supplies used by people in rural areas of developing countries have run into serious obstacles not only are public funds not available to build facilities for all but many newly constructed facilities have fallen into disrepair and disuse Along with the numerous failures there are also successes in this sector From these successes a new view has begun to emerge of what the guiding principles of rural water supply strategies should be This book brings together and spells out the constituents of this emerging view The central message is that it is the local people themselves not those trying to help them who have the most important role to play The community itself must be the primary decisionmaker the primary investor the primary organizer and the primary overseer The authors examine the implications of this primary principle for the main policy issues the level of service to be provided in different settings the level and mechanisms for cost recovery the roles for the private and public sectors and the role of women The potential advantages of proceeding from this outlook instead of the older top down approaches are considerable Improvement efforts are more likely to meet felt needs new facilities are more likely to be kept in service and more communities are more likely to get safe water sooner Study on the Impact of the Rural Water Supply and Sanitation Project [GAM/92/CO1-GAM/93/003-UNCDF/UNDP/GOTG FUNDED] Katharine Jones, 2003

Water & Sanitation Knowledge Management in Rural Cameroon Linus Elangwe, 2012-04 Master s Thesis from the year 2010 in the subject Politics Topic Development Politics University of Sussex Institute of Development Studies language English abstract The purpose of this study is to move beyond conventional thinking on rural water and sanitation infrastructure and resource management The study acknowledges the existence of other water management and sanitation tools but it engages its argument from a knowledge management perspective In most rural areas water and sanitation projects have been implemented and community members only enjoy these facilities for a short time Why The reason is simple Most donors and governments are often concerned with the specificity of their projects programmes long term sustainability is rarely guaranteed and those who are left to manage these water systems lack the necessary capacities skills it acknowledges the fact that knowledge is always incomplete and that rural water supply systems are in themselves a complex and dynamic system involving risks and uncertainties The study takes a look at the recent literatures on water resource management and rural water supply systems and the range of technological and institutional approaches that have been applied in the past years in an attempt to increase access and or reduce inequality By examining key reasons why the resource has proven so difficult to manage I came to the conclusion that in many cases the most promising solutions may lie outside highly conventional technological and institutional approaches The WKM model focuses on enhancing the generation flow and use of knowledge and information to enable comm
