international implique une cohérence globale du droit fiscal international conçu mondialement et non plus sous le seul angle des États souverains. Deux aspects caractérisent ce système : sa fonction et sa structure. S'agissant de sa fonction, il faut abandonner l'idée d'une unique vocation : neutraliser les effets néfastes du caractère international des situations sur la fiscalité pour rechercher l'objectif du système fiscal international dans les fonctions multiples de l'impôt : le rendement pragmatique et la justice fiscale plus conceptuelle. Quant à sa structure, une approche historique de la construction des règles fiscales internationales et du rôle tenu par les organisations internationales met en exergue la place particulière mais non exclusive de l'OCDE dans le système fiscal international et l'action fondamentale de la soft law internationale sur la hard law nationale.
