Selective Attention in Vision A. H. C. van der Heijden, 2003-09-02 Clarifies the complex concept of selective attention how the brain is able to select information from the vast amount available to it and provides a clear and explicit theory of central importance to psychologists Short-term Visual Information Forgetting (PLE: Memory) A.H.C. van der Heijden, 2014-05-09

When this title was originally published in 1981 the information processing approach to perception and memory was dominant in experimental psychology and the research reported here had major implications for future development After exploring the shortcomings of earlier work in this field the author develops a new model which he shows to be capable of accounting for a variety of experimental data connected with human information processing visual perception and attention The central theme which is discussed is how we select relevant and discard irrelevant information The basic assumption is that all incoming information is identified that is it reaches and activates the appropriate lexical entries A piece of identified information is described as a unit consisting of three distinguishable codes a visual code a lexical or semantic code and a motor or action code Identified information decays fast so selective attention operates by selecting those units which have to be saved from this rapid decay In a sense therefore the human information processor is described as struggling against forgetting

Perspectives on Perception and Action Herbert Heuer, Andries Sanders, 2016-07-07 Originally published in 1987 this title aimed to present an eclectic and biased account of the status of perception action relationships in various fields at the time The chapters can be divided into three sections The first focuses on motor control a neglected topic in the past and hence deserving the role of the starting point of this volume In addition motor control provides a good background to discuss the clear sensory and perceptual effects However motor processes are also highly relevant to perception which was usually less emphasized in the literature at the time Therefore a special section is devoted to motor processes in perception together with the issue of integrating information from different sources The book concludes with a section on attention and selection of perceptual information for subsequent action
