Dies beinhaltet u.a. den Zusammenhang zwischen Bildung und der Positionierung auf dem Arbeitsmarkt, die Risiken von Arbeitslosigkeit, die Rolle der Familie für Erwerbsentscheidungen und die Wirkung institutioneller Regelungen. Everywhere as a Polish commentator notes, men have too much power and women too much work. Nevertheless, these studies reveal large differences in the circumstances of women in different countries and help to illuminate the several developments in the labor market, the family and public policy which explain the extreme feminization of poverty in the United States. Frances Fox Piven, City University of New York. Lucid, careful and systematic, the book builds a compelling explanation for the needless impoverishment experienced by millions of American women and offers a sensible, realistic agenda for its reduction. Michael B. Katz, University of Pennsylvania. This study asks whether the feminization of poverty, the tendency of women and their families to become the majority of the poor, is unique to the United States, where the phenomenon was first discovered. Seven industrialized nations, both capitalist and socialist, with different degrees of commitment to social welfare are compared: Canada, Japan, France, Sweden, Poland, the Soviet Union, and the United States. In each of the countries, the authors analyze information about women, labor market conditions, equalization policies, social welfare programs, and demographic variables such as the rates of divorce and single parenthood. According to Goldberg and Kremen, it is possible to predict the feminization of poverty when three conditions are present: 1. insufficient efforts to reduce workplace and wage inequities for women; 2. the absence or ineffectiveness of social welfare programs which can redress the cost, both economic and personal, of the dual role that women have assumed in industrialized societies and 3 the presence of increasing rates of divorce and single motherhood An array of labor market and social welfare programs in use in the six other industrialized nations are then reviewed by the authors for possible adaptation in the United States This important work will be a valuable resource for scholars across the academic and professional disciplines of political science sociology economics social work and women s studies

Zwischen Selbstselektion und Diskriminierung Nicole Binder, 2007 Benachteiligung von Frauen am Arbeitsmarkt wird häufig nur anhand von Einkommensunterschieden untersucht Dabei wird ignoriert, da Benachteiligung auch anhand anderer nicht monetärer Indikatoren wie z. B. der Wahrscheinlichkeit für eine befristete oder berqualifizierte Beschäftigung wahrgenommen und gemessen werden kann Um Benachteiligung auf breiter Basis zu analysieren werden in dieser Dissertation unterschiedliche ökonomische und nicht ökonomische Ansätze zur Erklärung von Einkommensbenachteiligung vorgestellt und es wird ihre Anwendbarkeit auf alternative Benachteiligungsindikatoren geprüft Anhand der Daten des sozioökonomischen Panels SOEP werden die geschlechterspezifische berufliche Segregation sowie die Determinanten der Einkommenshöhe und alternativer Benachteiligungsindikatoren empirisch untersucht Dabei wird insbesondere auch analysiert, inwieweit die Wahl eines Mannes oder Frauenberufs verschiedene Benachteiligungsformen beeinflusst Die Analyse ergibt für einige Benachteiligungsindikatoren einen signifikanten Unterschied bei den Geschlechtern was m. glicherweise auf Diskriminierung zurückgeführt werden kann Andererseits berlagert bei anderen Indikatoren jedoch die Berufswahl den Einfluss des Geschlechts d. h. Männer in Frauenberufen werden ebenso benachteiligt wie Frauen Werden im Zusammenhang mit Benachteiligung bewusste individuelle Entscheidungen wie etwa zur Berufswahl oder zur Teilzeitbeschäftigung einbezogen relativiert sich das Ausmaß der Diskriminierung Gender Inequality at Work Jerry A.
