Psychoanalysis with children, the work with the parents, and the clinical structures

Leonardo S. Rodríguez

Five-year-olds

A lady telephoned me not long ago.

“Doctor, my son has a problem. Do you have any experience with five-year-old boys?”

“Madam, most of the children with whom I work are five-year-old boys.”

These children suffer from anxiety hysteria, probably the most common form of neurosis in our times among people of any age (Rodríguez, 2016). One hundred and sixteen years after the publication of his inaugural paper on Little Hans, Freud’s words are still pertinent:

Anxiety-hysterias are the most common of all psychoneurotic disorders. But, above all, they are those which make their appearance earliest in life; they are par excellence the neuroses of childhood. (Freud, 1909b, p. 116)

Many things have changed since the Professor offered the young Herbert Graf what might be considered as the first interpretation in

Psychoanalysis With Children Cb:

The Shattered Self Richard B. Ulman, Doris Brothers, 2013-05-13 Ulman and Brothers utilize a unique clinical research population of rape and incest victims and Vietnam combat veterans to argue that trauma results from real occurrences that have as their unconscious meaning the shattering of central organizing fantasies of self in relation to selfobject Their innovative treatment approach revolves around the transformation of these shattered fantasies in the intersubjective context of the transference countertransference neurosis The Psychoanalytic Study of the Child, 1955 Essential Research Findings in Child and Adolescent Counselling and Psychotherapy Nick Midgley, Jacqueline Hayes, Mick Cooper, 2017-02-13 What can child and adolescent counsellors and therapists learn from research What evidence is there for the effectiveness of different therapies and techniques How can developmental or neuroscience research inform or inspire therapeutic work with young people This book provides the answers to these questions and more Leading experts in the field take you through the latest research findings in child and adolescent therapy discussing how each is relevant to the work of practitioners Today both therapists and trainees need to be aware of and engage with research findings The book presents accessibly the current best knowledge and its implications for practice Methods of Research in Psychotherapy Louis A. Gottschalk, 2012-12-06 The prospective reader may well ask about the particular merits of this volume especially in view of several dozen similar offerings each with its own excellences and of the easy availability of symposia conferences conventional reviews abstract journals and serial research reports In spite of such other attractions it seems to me that these 34 essays are among the most informative and stimulating which are now available in the areas covered The editors have been successful in attracting new articles from many of the most prominent investigators now actively working at research in psychotherapy who can therefore speak for themselves about what they are doing Several of the articles have been in the preparatory stage for numerous years Not only do they represent the vanguard of research but because of the introduction of relatively new concepts in communication theory in the clinical setting which can be implemented by the new technology specifically the use of sound films and tape they probably presage the shape of much that is to come It is commonplace that the history of a science is closely allied to the history of the tools available Here we see the concepts attitudes and working methods on this frontier being set forth frankly and concretely in ways which avoid many of the deficiencies and evasions of previous clinical research Bibliography for Training in Child and Adolescent Mental Health Irving N. Patton, 2001 This extensive revision provides the balance of theory research and practical relevance needed by students in graduate and undergraduate introductory courses as well as practicing teachers and other professionals The book addresses foundations theoretical perspectives intervention practices and programmatic considerations derived from professional competencies presented in What Every Special Educator Must Know The International Standards for the Preparation and Certification of Special Education Teachers Entwicklungspsychologie Otto M. Ewert,1972 Mother-Child and Father-Child Psychotherapy Miriam Ben-Aaron,J. Harel,2000-10-19 Mother child and father child psychology is a psychodynamic developmental approach to relatively short term treatment of relational disturbances in young children The mother child father child and mother father dyads meet in weekly meetings with the same therapist in the same physical set up The therapist as a participant observer in recurrent patterns of interactions and relations within the dyads explicitly conveys to each parent that his her unique role to their child is to be respected and validated The approach is practised as a diagnostic assessment tool to help in the placing of pathology as a preparation in some cases for individual therapy for the child or simultaneous treatment for child and parent and as a treatment of choice for the relational disturbances between parents and their developmentally prelatency children This book provides an overview of theoretical similarities and differences in basic aspects of the parent child therapies and offers a detailed description of the main features of a new model that enhances the parents and the child s experiential learning Child and Adolescent Psychopathology Irving B. Burrows,John S.
