

HP1000 – Psychology Core Concepts Chapter 1 Notes

Chapter-opening problem: How would psychology test the claim that sugar makes children hyperactive?
- Question that should be answered by the end of the chapter (Self-note: testing the effect of sugar on the behavioural outcome of hyperactivity?)

1.1 Key Question – What is Psychology and What is It NOT?

1.1 Core Concept – Psychology is a broad field, with many specialties, but fundamentally psychology is the science of behaviour and mental processes.

Internal mental processes (observed indirectly) – e.g. thinking, feeling and desiring

External observable behaviours – e.g. talking, smiling and running

Scientific component of psychology – the science of psychology is based on objective, verifiable evidence, not just opinions of experts and authorities

Three ways of doing psychology:

1. Experimental/Research Psychologists – Psychologists who do research on basic psychological processes – as contrasted with applied psychologists.
2. Teachers of Psychology – Psychologists whose primary job is teaching, typically in high schools, colleges, and universities.
3. Applied Psychologists – Psychologists who use the knowledge developed by experimental psychologists to solve human problems.

Applied psychological specialties – Industrial and Organizational (I/O), Sports, School, Clinical and Counseling, Forensic, Environmental

Psychology is not psychiatry – Virtually all psychiatrists, but only some psychologists, treat mental disorders – and there the resemblance ends. Psychiatry is a medical specialty, not part of psychology at all. Psychiatrists view patients from a medical perspective, psychologists view people from a psychological perspective. E.g., clinical and counseling psychologists are likely to view the people they are helping as clients rather than patients.

Pseudo-psychology – Erroneous assertions or practices set forth as being scientific psychology.

Six Critical Thinking Skills that should be asked when confronting new ideas:

1. What is the source?
2. Is the claim reasonable or extreme?
3. What is the evidence? - Anecdotal evidence is not scientific evidence
4. Could bias contaminate the conclusion? - E.g., emotional bias, confirmation bias
5. Does the reasoning avoid common fallacies?
6. Does the issue require multiple perspectives? E.g., psychological, economic, sociological perspectives

As the students become more involved with Morrow, they begin to commit increasingly dangerous acts. The Secret History is an exceptional and gripping novel that will keep you wondering until the very end. The novel is a cautionary tale about the dangers of obsession and the power of evil.
