Introduction

In a more globalised world we are living in today, reading abilities are crucial, especially for career purposes. Teachers need to ensure that students develop the necessary skills in reading in order to prepare them for their future. Catherine Wallace, in Ronald Carter and David Nunan 2001:21, suggests that “... it is possible [...] to see reading as practice, product or process. The first has been the interest of anthropologists whose concern is with reading and writing practices as linked to their uses in everyday life, not merely within schooling. The second orientation focuses on the form and meaning of written texts and their constituent parts. The third perspective pays relatively greater attention to the role of the reader in the ongoing processing of written language and the strategies that she or he draws on in constructing meaning from text.”

Wallace's view of reading in different perspectives brings about the broader scope of reading to both the students and the teacher and compels teachers to work harder to involve students in both extensive and intensive reading programmes. As Harmer (2007:283) puts it, this aims to help students to “get maximum benefit from their reading”. But what it is understood by extensive reading and intensive reading.

Extensive reading Vs Intensive reading

Below we will look at the definition of the concepts extensive reading and intensive reading.

Extensive reading

Extensive reading is an approach to reading aiming at helping students build or expand their vocabulary, be familiar with grammar, spelling, sentence building, punctuation, how to bind sentences and ideas together in a text among many other aspects of language through large
