Post and Courier Service in the Diplomacy of Early Modern Europe E.J.B. Allen,1973 Diplomatic negotiation of our day is a curious mix of national endeavor within the bloc concept The remnants of our nineteenth century nationalism struggles half willingly with the power that a larger continental or ideological bloc might bring In the sixteenth century men knew that the protective bloc of Christendom would not provide peace yet they were not sure that the new national states would secure it either We have much to gain from a study of diplomatic procedures and institutions in such a transitional period This monograph is based upon the great collections of published diplomatic correspondence of England France and Spain and thanks to the generosity of Dr De Lamar Jensen I have been fortunate in having at my disposal his hoard of microfilmed letters and dispatches of the leading ambassadors of the sixteenth century Of course I have not read all the diplomatic correspondence but I believe I have culled sufficient information to show and analyze the role played by the post and courier service in the diplomacy of Early Modern Europe

British Diplomacy in Turkey G. R. Berridge,2009 Since the early twentieth century the resident embassy has been supposed to be living on borrowed time By means of an exhaustive historical account of the contribution of the British Embassy in Turkey to Britain's diplomatic relationship with that state this book shows this to be false Part A analyses the evolution of the embassy as a working unit up to the First World War the buildings diplomats dragomans consular network and communications Part B examines how without any radical changes except in its communications it successfully met the heavy demands made on it in the following century for example by playing a key role in a multitude of bilateral negotiations and providing cover to secret agents and drugs liaison officers of Power Ruth Ahnert, Sebastian E. Ahnert, 2024-02-16 Tudor Networks of Power is the product of a groundbreaking collaboration between an early modern book historian and a physicist specializing in complex networks Together they have reconstructed and computationally analysed the networks of intelligence diplomacy and political influence across a century of Tudor history 1509-1603 based on the British State Papers The 130 000 letters that survive in the State Papers from the Tudor period provide crucial information about the textual organization of the social network centred on the Tudor government Whole libraries have been written using this archive but until now nobody has had access to the macroscopic tools that allow us to ask questions such as What are the reasons for the structure of the Tudor government's intelligence network What was its geographical reach and coverage Can we use network data to show patterns of surveillance What role did women play in these government networks And what biases are there in the data The authors employ methods from the field of network science translating key concepts and approaches into a language accessible to literary scholars and historians and illustrating them with examples drawn from this fantastically rich archive Each chapter is the product of a set of thematically organized experiments which show how particular methods can help to ask and answer research questions specific to the State Papers archive but also have applications for other large bodies of humanities data The fundamental aim of this book therefore is not merely to provide an innovative perspective on Tudor politics it also aspires to introduce an entirely new audience to the methods and applications of network science and to suggest the suitability of these methods for a range of humanistic inquiry Identity and Coexistence in the Early Modern Mediterranean Eric Dursteler, 2000

Information and Power in History Ida Nijenhuis, Marijke van Faassen, Ronald Sluiter, Joris Gijsenbergh, Wim de Jong, 2020-01-29 The relationship between information and power is a relevant subject for all times Today's perceived information revolution has caused information to become a separate object of study during the last two decades for several disciplines As the contemporary perspective is dominant information history as a discipline of its own has not yet crystallized

In bringing together studies around a new research agenda on the relationship between information and power across time and space presenting various governance regimes media materials and modes of communication this book forces us to rethink the prospects and challenges for such a new discipline Early Modern European History, C.1492-1788 ,1983
