SHE HAS NO PLACE IN PARADISE

A groom is filled with dread at his upcoming wedding ceremony in which his marriage will be forced. His fear of his mother turns to hate and hatred for the young unknown bride he is obliged to marry. This story of power and oppression is the first in a new collection which brilliantly exposes the relationship between individuals in today's society. A man is terrified to speak the truth to men more powerfully placed than he; a woman knows nothing of the feelings her well-to-do husband's friend has for her; discovering her emerging sexuality is a teenage father's with her education and fear of her father; a mother, torn between love and fear, is emphasizing discipline that the essential core of herself can withdraw and survive.

Written by one of Egypt's leading writers, this latest volume of modern short stories on sexual politics follows Nawal El Saadawi's excellent earlier volumes, Death of an Ex-Minister about which reviewers commented:

"Finely judged and chilling in their matter-of-factness" can users

"Highly turned political insights... fascinating characters" can users

"Powerful stories that are written simply and directly, making them all the more poignant and startling" can users

"They're brilliant... The writing is subtle and sensitive and the translation is excellent" can users

A collection of remarkably controlled, provocative and well-written stories" can users
