Branko Milanovic, Banco Mundial, 1995 Poverty in Transition Economies Sandra Hutton, Gerry Redmond, 2013-01-11 This study addresses the experience of and responses to poverty in a range of transition economies including Russia Ukraine Hungary Slovenia Uzbekistan Romania Albania and Macedonia It covers topics such as the definition of poverty lines and the measurement of poverty the role of income in kind in supporting families homelessness and destitution housing the design targeting and administration of welfare and personal responses to economic transition

Making Transition Work for Everyone World Bank, 2000 Annotation This book brings together the latest findings on the nature and evolution of poverty and inequality in the region

Poverty, Inequality, and Social Policy in Transition Economies Branko Milanovic, 2016 What happens to poverty and income inequality during the early period of transition to a market economy Poverty is on the rise and income inequality widens Better targeting of social assistance and pension reform are the necessary policy reforms In examining what happens to poverty and income inequality during the early period of transition to a market economy Milanovic covers the period up to 1993 His analysis includes almost all transition economies that were not affected by wars blockades or embargoes In economies so affected the intrinsic issues of transition are overshadowed by more basic issues of war or quasi war economy and survival The two key issues of social policy in transition economies are pension reform and better targeting of social assistance Pensions represent 70 to 80 percent of cash social expenditures No reduction of current levels of social spending which is unsustainable can be envisaged without pension reform Better targeting of social assistance is needed because many universally or enterprise provided benefits have been terminated poverty has increased and social programs lack funding If poverty is on the rise and money is scarce better targeting is the only option This paper a product of the Transition Economics Division Policy Research Department is part of a larger effort in the department to study social effects of transition

Poverty in Transition? United Nations Development Programme. Regional Bureau for Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States, 1998 Transition has already led to success in many countries Nations such as Hungary Poland Slovenia Czech Republic Estonia have numerous achievements to their credit Further countries such as Uzbekistan were able to effectively protect many citizens from acute socio economic distress A wealth of natural resources in countries such as the Russian Federation Kazakhstan and Azerbaijan promises the potential for prosperity At the same time the process of transition has been painful for millions of citizens There has been an unprecedented increase in poverty and mortality in countries some of which have become ironically the most unequal in the world Further the countries of the former Soviet Union have suffered sharper reversals than any other region of the world in three indicators of socio economic distress mortality income and inflation This report not only documents these adverse developments but also outlines the measures required to address poverty Poverty and Social Assistance in Transition Countries J. Braithwaite,C. Grootaert,B. Milanovic,2016-02-10 Declining incomes and growing income inequality have led to a rise in poverty in the transition economies of Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union This study examines poverty and social assistance in six countries Bulgaria Hungary Poland Estonia Russia and the Kyrgyz Republic comparing the poverty profiles and the correlates of poverty between the two regions The study finds that the profile of poverty is more sharply defined in Eastern Europe than in the former Soviet Union where poverty is more widespread This holds the potential for better targeting of social assistance in Eastern Europe and the study proposes a novel two step approach to identify the poor Poverty, Income Distribution and Well-Being in Asia During the Transition Lu Aiguo,Manuel F. Montes,2002-05-22 The Asian road to the market has generally been seen as a model of success and the object of widespread admiration This volume evaluates the actual experience and debunks some of the most widespread myths It does so by identifying the link between alternative transition models public policies and household responses on the one hand and key welfare changes on the other Even in countries experiencing sustained growth there have been unmistakable signs of deep social strain Measuring Poverty Dynamics and Inequality in Transition Economies Erzo F. P. Luttmer,2001 Estimates of income inequality and the dynamics of poverty are highly sensitive to measurement error and transitory shocks in micro level data The apparent high levels of economic mobility in Poland and Russia are driven largely by transitory shocks and noisy data There is a real risk of an entrenched underclass emerging in these transition economies Poverty and the Economic Transition Peter Lanjouw,Branko Milanovic,Stefano Paternostro,1998 Poverty and the Economic Transition Peter F. Lanjouw,Branko Milanovic,Stefano Paternostro,2004 Has the economic transition in Eastern Europe and the countries of the former Soviet Union been harder on pensioner households or on households containing children Do per capita measures of welfare give a misleading picture Much attention has been paid to the relative vulnerability of two well defined household groups during the transition Some observers argue that old age pensioner households have been relatively protected because of a less steep decline in real pensions compared with wages in most transition economies By contrast households with young children are believed to have experienced a substantial decline in living standards under reform and show strikingly higher rates of measured poverty than pensioner households But others argue that the elderly have suffered more than the young during the transition Can these conflicting viewpoints about the relative poverty of old and young households be arbitrated Lanjouw Milanovic and Paternostro show that strong though implicit assumptions underpin certain poverty comparisons Notably using a per capita measure of individual welfare assumes that there are no economies of scale in household consumption in the sense that the per capita cost of reaching a specific level of welfare does not fall as household size increases Relaxing that assumption could affect comparisons showing higher poverty rates among the elderly because their households tend to be smaller than the households containing children Even the nature of the transition has implications for economies of scale The relative cost of housing and other goods and services with at least some public good characteristics has risen rapidly These relative price shifts hit small households particularly hard because a greater share of their expenditures goes to public and quasi public goods But transition economies have also experienced big increases in the relative prices of goods and services consumed largely by children such as kindergarten and other education services These increases affect younger households more Since there is no accepted way to establish the true extent of economies of scale in a given country the question can't be answered exactly But clearly a small departure from a per capita measure may be enough in some cases to overturn the conventional relative ranking of poverty headcounts poverty among the elderly may then turn out to be worse than among children This paper a product of Poverty and Human Resources Development Research Group is part of a larger effort in the group to study changes in welfare and inequality during the transition

The Political Economy of Rural Livelihoods in Transition Economies Max Spoor, 2008-09-26 Rural poverty is a phenomenon that is widespread yet often ignored by policy makers and researchers This edited volume looks critically at rural poverty in Central Eastern Europe Russia the Caucasus and Central Asia China and Vietnam in relation to land reform farm restructuring and the development of rural markets and in the context of a large gap between rural and urban incomes and deteriorating rural social services and infrastructure Although in most countries rural poverty has been decreasing in the past few years economic growth in rural areas is slow and rural incomes are not catching up with the rapid overall growth rates of these transition economies In general the livelihoods of rural dwellers remain relatively poor Next to comparative studies the chapters in this book explore various aspects of agrarian reform and analyze the interlocking or interlinking land input and output markets that are crucial for rural development that have often remained weakly developed in transition economies including case studies from Russia Moldova Uzbekistan Armenia Vietnam and China and a wealth of detailed analysis These chapters reflect the striking differences between transition countries in their processes of rural reform and development of rural poverty These differences are generally dependent on the initial conditions at the eve of transition the policies implemented the sequencing of reforms and the importance that was given to the sector in the overall development strategy such as can be seen if the Asian transition economies ATEs are compared with many of those in Eastern Europe

Human Poverty in Transition Economies Ewa Ruminska-Zimny, 1997* INDUSTRIAL POLICY AND POVERTY IN TRANSITION ECONOMIES: TWO STEPS FORWARD OR ONE STEP BACK? SUSAN J. LINZ, 1998 Income, Inequality, and Poverty During the Transition from Planned to Market Economy Branko Milanović, 1998 World Bank Technical Paper No 394 Joint Forest Management JFM has emerged as an important intervention in the management of India's forest resources This report sets out an analytical

method for examining the costs and benefits of JFM arrangements Two pilot case studies in which the method was used demonstrate interesting outcomes regarding incentives for various groups to participate The main objective of this study is to develop a better understanding of the incentives for communities to participate in JFM

Jeanine Braithwaite, Christiaan Grootaert, Branko Milanović, 2000 Declining incomes and growing income inequality have led to a rise in poverty in the transition economies of Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union This study examines poverty and social assistance in six countries Bulgaria Hungary Poland Estonia Russia and the Kyrgyz Republic comparing the poverty profiles and the correlates of poverty between the two regions The study finds that the profile of poverty is more sharply defined in Eastern Europe than in the former Soviet Union where poverty is more widespread This holds the potential for better targeting of social assistance in Eastern Europe In addition the authors propose a two step approach to identifying those stricken by poverty

Labor Markets and Social Policy in Central and Eastern Europe

N. A. Barr, 2005-01-01 Labor Markets and Social Policy in Central and Eastern Europe summarises social policy reform during the transition and EU accession and analyses the social policy challenges which continue to face both old and new member states Specifically the book amplifies two sets of arguments First social policy under communism was in important respects well suited to the old order and precisely for that reason was systematically badly suited to a market economy Strategic reform directions thus followed from the nature of the transition process and from constraints imposed by EU accession Secondly successful accession is not the end of the story economic and social trends over the past 50 years are creating strains for social policy which all countries old and new members will have to face This book will be of interest to readers interested in social policy particularly those with an interest in the process of post communist transition in EU accession and in future social policy challenges for the wider Europe It should be of interest to academics in departments of economics social policy and political science and to policy makers including government advisers and civil servants
