Hindu Women and the Power of Ideology Vanaja Dhruvarajan, 1989 Why as Dhruvarajan asks do most rural Hindu women continue to accept sometimes even cherish household arrangements that humiliate dominate and depersonalize them According to Dhruvarajan the Indian patriarchy successfully socializes millions of females into emulating pativrata the doctrine of total devotion to one's husband when married and obeisance to male dominance when not married What distinguishes Dhruvarajan's work from similar studies is her meticulous ethnography of household life as a blueprint for life cycles ruled by traditional sex role relationships In her analysis of 46 Kannada speaking Brahmin and Vokkaliga families of a south Indian village Dhruvarajan weaves a tight tapestry from colorful undercurrents of everyday rural life evident only to a participant observer Choice A poignant case study of the way in which ideology religion and social structure have converged to subjugate women The author demonstrates how this blatantly patriarchal society is justified by an ideology Pativrata which holds that a woman's spiritual salvation depends upon her total devotion service and subordination to her husband A revealing and fascinating book for feminists scholars and students of religion and Indian culture Vanaja Dhruvarajan is Professor of Sociology at the University of Winnipeg Manitoba and also teaches Women's Studies She is particularly familiar with her subject as she was born and raised in India
