ABSTRACT

Digital learning technologies have increasingly emerged as critical tools in informing education policy, particularly in fostering equity in education for countries with under-resourced regions. This study explores how national education policies are influenced in integrating technology as a catalyst in bridging the educational divide and improving access to quality learning in an equitable manner. The quantitative survey method was used whereby the study covered 1,200 policymakers and educators from 15 countries in the Global South. Participants were selected based on involvement in the development of education policy or the implementation of digital learning in their communities. Responses were obtained through a structured questionnaire with respect to their perceptions about the implications of technology-driven policies for educational equity. Results indicated that 85% of the participants perceive that, with the advent of digital learning platforms, the access to education in distant and rural areas has increased phenomenally. Further, 78% of the participants believed that digital tools have helped in reducing the gap in educational outcomes between an urban and rural setup. In countries with strong policies related to digital education, a resultant increase of 25% in enrollment was observed in marginalized groups within two years of the adoption of that policy. Seventy percent of the respondents also claimed that digital education has revolutionized learning outcomes, allowing students with disabilities to be included more within mainstream education systems. The study concluded by establishing that technology plays an important role in shaping the equitable national policies of education. It is recommended that policymakers should focus on strengthening the infrastructure of digitals, training teachers, and providing resources to ensure inclusive education for all. Future research should now investigate the impact of digital learning policies on educational equity in the long term, and their potential for scalability across different national contexts.

Education Policy Les Bell, Howard Stevenson, 2006-09-27 The study of educational leadership makes little sense unless it is in relation to who the leaders are how they are leading what is being led and with what effect Based on the premise that learning is at the heart of leadership and that leaders themselves should be learners the Leadership for Learning series explores the connections between educational leadership policy curriculum human resources and accountability Each book in the series approaches its subject matter through a three fold structure of process themes and impact Series Editors Clive Dimmock Mark Brundrett and Les Bell As global pressures focus increasing attention on the outcomes of education policy and on their implications for economic prosperity and social citizenship the experience of each individual learner is decisively shaped by the wider policy environment However there is often an underdeveloped understanding of how education policy is formed what drives it and how it impacts on schools and colleges This book explicitly makes these connections and links them to the wider challenges of educational leadership in a modern context Education Policy is divided into three sections which examine the development of policy at the levels of the nation state and individual institutions the forces that shape policies with emphasis on human capital theory citizenship and social justice and accountability research based case studies highlighting the application of policy in a range of situations The book provides a valuable resource for students practitioners middle managers and educational leaders in all sectors both in the UK and internationally who are engaged on masters and doctoral degrees or undertaking leadership training and preparation programmes
