Privatizing Eastern Europe The Role Of Markets And Ownership In The Transition:

Privatizing Eastern Europe J.M. Van Brabant, 2012-12-06 This volume is meant to be a modest contribution to the ongoing debate about the transitions away from the administrative planning environment typical of the former communist regimes The central subject matter is a fairly special one namely the privatization of these economies together with the restoration and effective monitoring of property rights These are paramount tasks of the ongoing transformations once progress toward political democracy is secured Though I would not allot divestment of existing state owned assets the kind of pivotal importance that some observers reserve for it changing rules on the utilization of these assets is evidently at the core of what the transition toward market based economic systems should be all about Rather than examining the entire range of issues that surround the controversy on privatization this volume is primarily concerned with the economics of taking the state out of the decision making about existing assets Among the several aspects of this discussion three stand out One is the establishment of clear property rights This is fundamental to minimize transaction costs in an environment where decisions will increasingly be taken by independent economic agents acting on their own account Second I look only incidentally at the various angles of creating capital markets particularly for existing assets in these economies Der

Transition and Sustainability: Actors and Interests in Eastern European Environmental Policies Bernd Baumgartl, 1997-07-07 This study links two major themes in European Social Science in the 1990s The transition of Eastern Europe And The question of sustainable development Are environmental difficulties in this time and place just a component of European transitional difficulties generally Or conversely are European transitional difficulties themselves a product of environmental problems This work analyses both views with an interdisciplinary approach and argues that sustainable development takes on a specific meaning in the context of transition

Transition and Sustainability documents the history of environmental policy in Bulgaria based on both western and eastern sources identifying the relevant actors For The Eastern European environment and their interests While recognising the dominance of non environmental issues like the emergence of parties privatisation or restitution of property and economic restraints on Europe during post Communist transition The text proposes that concrete policy recommendations may result in sustainable development for transitioning economies

Industrial Policy in Eastern Europe J.M. Van Brabant, 1993-10-31 This volume in essence continues my recent contributions towards building up a better understanding of the wide range of obstacles besetting the transitions away from administrative planning in the former communist regimes in the eastern part of Europe It is self contained however As such it specifically addresses issues revolving around how best to govern economies and indeed societies more generally that are undergoing fundamental structural transformation and whether industrial policy can facilitate progressing with the vexing transformations that will have to be enacted over a protracted period of time Because of the bewildering variety of hindrances that the managers of the transition have been confronted with many of which were not even contemplated when the programs were first designed regaining a measure of good governance including notably good economic governance is critical in formulating a positive political economy of transition Arguably most critical is steering the processes of destruction and creation not creative destruction in the Schumpeterian sense In some cases this requires reallocating decommissioned resources both capital and labor to new activities Changing rules on the utilization of existing assets is evidently at the core of what the transition towards market based economic systems should be all about Very often however this requires establishing new economic activities from domestic and foreign savings
