Institutional Development and Transition Asya El-Meehy, 2013 Have Arab uprisings opened space for deeper grassroots driven decentralization reforms in the region What are the optimum designs sequencing and models of decentralization for countries in political transition While political discourse in the region uniformly emphasizes reforming State institutions decentralization reform agendas have unfolded along contrasting trajectories across Arab transition countries Both contextual and historical dynamics seem to shape visions for the orientation and pace of decentralization reforms as well as the empirical feasibility of shifting power relations among the various tiers of State administration Drawing on findings from field research and recent analyses this study argues that uprisings have created stronger momentum for revisiting the question of decentralization reforms in Libya and Yemen where the very nature of the State is being redefined compared to the cases of Egypt and Tunisia where all stakeholders agree on preserving the unitary State model In the latter cases while there is evidence that new advocacy movements focused on reforming local government structures have emerged they have thus far remained elite led Grassroots activism at local community levels has served to empower new actors who in some cases have been successful at extracting concessions from local authorities These efforts however predominantly focus on improving access to public services within the existing context of centralized State structures and seem often to have failed to gain the trust of local community members as potential partners in local governance Building on focus group discussions among working class residents in Greater Cairo and on interviews with Egyptian political elites the study highlights an emerging critical gap between youth expectations and on the other hand the envisioned plans of the political elite While youth are more likely to demand deeper reforms across all three dimensions of decentralization administrative fiscal and political political elites disagree not only on which particular dimension s of reforms should be implemented but also on the urgency of decentralization during early phases of political transformation The latter s wide range of views reflect deep concerns over political capture by traditional elites weakness of political parties as well as potentially detrimental impacts of reforms on State capacity and the nation State s territorial integrity The study concludes by drawing lessons from France s successful contract based record of decentralization and presents policy recommendations for countries that have emerged from the Arab uprisings with relatively strong centralized State structures and cohesive national identities Publisher s description
