Philosophy in Experience Richard Hart, Douglas R. Anderson, 1996 This collection of essays aims to mark a place for American philosophy as it moves into the twenty first century Taking their cue from the work of Peirce James Santayana Dewey Mead Buchler and others the contributors assess and employ philosophy as an activity taking place within experience and culture Within the broad background of the American tradition the essays reveal a variety of approaches to the transition in which American philosophy is currently engaged Some of the pieces argue from an historical dialogue with the tradition some are more polemically involved with American philosophy s current status among the contemporary philosophical schools and still others seek to reveal the possibilities for the future of American philosophy In thus addressing past present and future the pieces taken together outline a trajectory for American philosophy that reinvents its importance from a new angle of vision
