Public Policy Decision Making and Regulation Douglas G. Hartle, 1979 From the Executive Summary The study attempts to provide a conceptual framework that will assist the reader in understanding the factors that primarily determine a government's decision to adopt a particular regulation The competition among parties for electoral support the circumstances under which special interest groups can be formed and exert pressure on ministers and officials the perceptual limitations of the electorate and the use of rules and procedures to bias the outcome of regulatory bodies are considered Some hypothetical illustrations are also offered as a means of conveying how the framework can be applied to the analysis of several distinct types of regulations

Corporate Regulation for Climate Change Mitigation in Africa Kikelomo O. Kila, 2022-09-08 This book critically analyses the prospects of overhauling the legal framework of climate change regulation of corporations in African state It adopts the dilute interventionism regulatory framework to tackle the culture of regulatory resistance by corporations in Africa Over the course of this volume Kikelomo O Kila critiques the climate change legal framework in all 53 African states and conducts an in depth case study of the two largest economies in Africa Nigeria and South Africa to highlight the commonality of the problems in Africa and the potential for the dilute interventionism paradigm to significantly address these problems The book establishes why African states should directly intervene through legislative mechanisms to compel corporations to incorporate climate change mitigation in their business activities It proposes that this direct intervention should comprise a blend of prescriptive and facilitative mechanisms structured in a dilute interventionism regulatory model Overall this volume argues that implementing this model requires the institution of a strong and independent regulator with a veto firewall protection system that guarantees its de facto independence from government and external influences Corporate Regulation for Climate Change Mitigation in Africa will be of great interest to climate change stakeholders at the international regional and domestic levels policymakers regulatory practitioners and legal experts on corporate regulation It will also be an insightful resource for students and scholars of climate change and environmental law policy and governance

Governing through Regulation Eric Windholz, 2017-06-26 Over the past forty years numerous theoretical advances have been made From Ayres and Braithwaite's ground breaking work on responsive regulation we have seen models of smart regulation regulatory governance and regulatory capitalism emerge to capture the growing prevalence and importance of regulation in modern liberal Western capitalist societies Important advances also have been made in the practice of regulation with regulators evolving from traditional enforcement focussed command and control models to being modern regulators with a suite of diverse and innovative regulatory tools at their disposal The book presents and critically examines these theoretical and practical developments from the perspective of governments who design regulations and the regulators that deploy them In doing so the book examines the various forces and interests that influence and shape the regulatory endeavour and the practical challenges facing governments and regulators when deciding whether and how to regulate This volume is a study of regulation in context in the context of the public policy it is designed to deliver the law that enables shapes and holds it to account and the evolving societal and institutional frameworks within which it takes place Aimed to provide innovative cross disciplinary conceptual frameworks that regulators regulatees those whom regulation is intended to benefit and academics might employ to better understand and undertake the regulatory endeavour This will be of great interest to researchers educators advanced students and practitioners working in the fields of political science public management and administration and public policy

Modelling Enterprise Behaviour in a Food Regulation Environment Henrik Krapp, 2012-01-12 Regulatory frameworks are a common tool in the EU food policy to achieve objectives on the society level e g an increase in the society s health status Analyses of potential consequences of regulatory frameworks are a basis for policy makers deciding on their implementation To support policy decision making the thesis builds on an ex ante approach considering the development path from a regulation via enterprises behaviour to society consequences Limiting the thesis focus on modelling the enterprise behaviour towards regulations its objective is to generate a step by step approach for regulatory decision support in food policy and to transform this approach into a computer based interactive system After a theoretical background the thesis presents a basis of an argumentation line that should lead to the requested results i e the enterprise compliance behaviour This hypothesis is specified and validated according to a decision scenario defined by two regulatory frameworks A step by step approach for regulatory decision support is generated composed of two knowledge areas 1 A sequence of arguments relying on expertise and 2 a knowledge base backing up the arguments with modular data relying on various sources Of importance for decision aiding is transparency improvement and complexity reduction which is considered by the step by step procedure and the filter concept of each argument reducing the model scope The utilization of the step by step approach through field tests in the cereals industry of several EU countries approved the desired outcome and identified improvement potential The improved model is translated into a decision support system The user interface supports the utilization of the model by guiding the interaction between the sequence of arguments the knowledge base and the analyst who has to make the specifications necessary to go from one step to the next The decision support system presents to the policy maker the status quo of the compliance level the potential increase through the regulatory framework and the lack in compliance based on the estimated behaviour of affected enterprise classes The transparency of the system enables recommendations of specific changes in the regulatory framework or corrective policy actions Basics of Open Innovation , Welcome to the forefront of knowledge with Cybellium your trusted partner in mastering the cutting edge fields
