

INTRODUCTION

- Globalization has increased the integration of international markets and the interdependence of countries worldwide for a wide range of services and commodities.
- There has been growing concerns about the place of developing countries in international trade and development amidst continuous technological innovation and cut-throat competition.
- And are still hugely challenged in having to deal with the backlog of underdevelopment, poverty and infrastructure deficit in a sustained manner.
- We have conducted this study to understand how UNCTAD helps in alleviating these challenges that the underdeveloped and developing countries face.
