Electric News in Colonial Algeria Arthur Asseraf, 2019-08-08 How do the things which connect us also serve to divide us Electric News in Colonial Algeria traces how news circulated in a particularly divided society Algeria under French rule in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries It tells a different history of globalization one which puts the experience of everyday people at the centre The years between 1881 and 1940 were those of maximum colonial power in North Africa a period of intense technological revolution global high imperialism and the expansion of settler colonialism Algerians became connected to international networks of news and local people followed distant events with great interest But once news reached Algeria accounts of recent events often provoked conflict as they moved between different social groups In a society split between its native majority and a substantial settler minority distant wars led to riots Circulation and polarisation were two sides of the same coin Examining a range of sources in multiple languages across colonial society Electric News in Colonial Algeria offers a new understanding of the spread of news News was a whole ecosystem in which new technologies such as the printing press telegraph cinema and radio interacted with older media like songs rumours letters and manuscripts The French government watched anxiously over these developments monitoring Algerians reactions to news through an extensive network of surveillance that often ended up spreading news rather than controlling its flow By tracking what different people thought of as news this history helps us reconsider the relationship between time media and historical change Making Settler Colonial Space Tracey Banivanua Mar, P.
