Rising Expectations Arthur Emery Farnsley, 2003 Rising Expectations examines the current attempts to enlist religious congregations as partners in social services and community development It highlights stark demographic realities about urban congregations in order to challenge current assumptions about welfare reform and to encourage realistic expectations for the future Both governmental officials and civic leaders are calling on religious congregations to become more active partners in social welfare reforms especially through Charitable Choice Based on research conducted in Indianapolis Indiana Farnsley examines the context for those changes and evaluates the current and potential role for congregations as community development agencies and social service providers Farnsley begins with an assessment of congregations seen as one interdependent piece in a complex urban environment He then deals with the three basic assumptions about congregations that drive contemporary faith based reforms How well do congregations know their neighbors Is smaller better and Can congregations impart values Finally the book considers plans for future implementation or expansion of reform

Charitable Choice at Work Sheila Suess Kennedy,Wolfgang Bielefeld,2006 Too often say its critics U S domestic policy is founded on ideology rather than evidence Take Charitable Choice legislation enacted with the assumption that faith based organizations can offer the best assistance to the needy at the lowest cost The Charitable Choice provision of the 1996 Welfare Reform Act buttressed by President Bush s Faith Based Initiative of 2000 encouraged religious organizations including congregations to bid on government contracts to provide social services But in neither year was data available to prove or disprove the effectiveness of such an approach Charitable Choice at Work fills this gap with a comprehensive look at the evidence for and against faith based initiatives Sheila Suess Kennedy and Wolfgang Bielefeld review the movement s historical context along with legal analysis of constitutional concerns including privatization federalism and separation of church and state Using both qualitative and where possible statistical data the authors analyze the performance of job placement programs in three states with a representative range of religious political and demographic traits Massachusetts Indiana and North Carolina Throughout they focus on measurable outcomes as they compare non faith based with faith based organizations nonprofits with for profits and the logistics of contracting before and after Charitable Choice Among their findings in states where such information is available the composition of social service contractor pools has changed very little Reflecting their varied political cultures states have funded programs differently Faith based organizations have not been eager to seek government contracts perhaps wary of additional legal restraints and reporting burdens The authors conclude that faith based organizations appear no more effective than secular organizations at government funded social service provision that there has been no dramatic change in the social welfare landscape since Charitable Choice and that the constitutional concerns of its detractors may be valid This empirical study penetrates the fog of the culture wars moving past controversy over the role of religion in public life to offer pragmatic suggestions for policymakers and organizations who must decide how best to assist the needy
