Risk Assessment Of In Ready-to-eat Foods Interpretative Summary:

Microbiological Risk Assessment - Guidance for food Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, World Health Organization, 2021-06-07 This document provides guidance on undertaking risk assessment of all microbial hazards which may adversely affect human health in foods along a food chain This document is also intended to provide practical guidance on a structured framework for carrying out risk assessment of microbiological hazards in foods focussing on the four components including hazard identification hazard characterization exposure assessment and risk characterization These guidelines therefore represent the best practice at the time of their preparation and it is hoped that they will help stimulate further developments and disseminate the current knowledge

Risk Assessment of Listeria Monocytogenes in Ready-to-eat Foods World Health Organization, 2004 Cases of listeriosis appear to be predominantly associated with ready to eat products FAO and WHO have undertaken a risk assessment of Listeria monocytogenes in ready to eat foods prepared and reviewed by an international team of scientists Input was received from several international fora including expert consultations and Codex Alimentarius committee meetings as well as via public and peer review This interpretative summary provides an overview of how the risk assessment was undertaken and the results In particular it provides information relevant to risk managers addressing problems posed by this pathogen in ready to eat foods It includes answers to the specific risk management questions posed by the Codex Committee on Food Hygiene and outlines the issues to be considered when implementing control measures including the establishment of microbiological criteria

Risk assessment tools for Vibrio parahaemolyticus and Vibrio vulnificus associated with seafoods World Health Organization, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2020-02-20 There has been an increase in reported outbreaks and cases of foodborne disease attributed to pathogenic Vibrio species As a result there have been several instances where the presence of pathogenic Vibrio spp in seafood has led to a disruption in international trade The number of Vibrio species being recognized as potential human pathogens is increasing The food safety concerns associated with these microorganisms have led to the need for microbiological risk assessment to support risk management decision making for their control

Risk assessment tools for Vibrio parahaemolyticus and Vibrio vulnificus associated with seafood Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, World Health Organization, 2020-02-10 There has been an increase in reported outbreaks and cases of foodborne disease attributed to pathogenic Vibrio species As a result there have been several instances where the presence of pathogenic Vibrio spp in seafood has led to a disruption in international trade A number of Vibrio spp are increasingly being recognized as potential human pathogens The food safety concerns associated with these microorganisms have led to the need for microbiological risk assessment for their control This report provides the review of risk assessment of existing tools for V parahaemolyticus and V vulnificus in oysters and different bivalve molluscan species the available information on testing methodology and recommend microbiological methods to monitor the levels of pathogenic Vibrio spp

in seafood and or water Such tools are envisioned to support countries in their efforts to use risk based approaches in the selection of control measures appropriate for their seafood species primary production and post harvest practices This volume and others in this Microbiological Risk Assessment Series contain information that is useful to both risk assessors and risk managers the Codex Alimentarius Commission governments and regulatory authorities food producers and processors and other institutions and individuals with an interest in Vibrio spp and its control

Advances in science and risk assessment tools for Vibrio parahaemolyticus and V. vulnificus associated with seafood ,2021-08-04 Ranking of low-moisture foods in support of microbiological risk management: Meeting report and systematic review Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,World Health Organization,2022-07-22 Low moisture foods LMF are foods that are naturally low in moisture or are produced from higher moisture foods through drying or dehydration processes These foods typically have a long shelf life and have been perceived for many years to not represent microbiological food safety risk hazards However in recent years a number of outbreaks of foodborne illnesses linked to LMF has illustrated that despite the fact that microorganisms cannot grow in these products bacteria do have the possibility to persist for long periods of time in these matrices Responding to a request from the Codex Committee on Food Hygiene CCFH the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations FAO and the World Health Organization WHO implemented a series of activities aimed at collating and analysing the available information on microbiological hazards related to LMF and ranking the foods of greatest concern from a microbiological food safety perspective Seven categories of LMF which were ultimately included in the ranking process and the output of the risk ranking in descending order was as follows cereals and grains dried protein products spices and dried herbs nuts and nut products confections and snacks dried fruits and vegetables and seeds for consumption

Advances in science and risk assessment tools for Vibrio parahaemolyticus and V. vulnificus associated with seafood Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,World Health Organization,2021-07-20 Globally the Vibrio parahaemolyticus and Vibrio vulnificus represent important human pathogens associated with the consumption of seafood In response to the requests for scientific advice from Codex Committee on Food Hygiene CCFH risk assessments for the pathogens V. vulnificus V. cholerae V. parahaemolyticus and guidance on methods for the detection of Vibrio spp with seafood have been conducted and published previously by JEMRA In order to provide an update on the state of the art advice regarding risk assessment for V. parahaemolyticus and V. vulnificus in seafood an expert meeting was convened Several critical developments in the last decade were subsequently noted by the expert working group 1 The emergence of highly pathogenic strains 2 In response to climate change there has been a significant geographical spread regarding when and where these seafood associated Vibrio infections 3 Demographic considerations are very important 4 A range of new approaches for best practice and 5 A range of new methods such as those utilising genomics and satellite imagery This report describes the output of that expert meeting

microbiological risk management World Health Organization, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2021-02-28 This book a collaborative effort by the FAO and WHO evaluates the risks associated with low moisture foods LMF and their potential to harbor foodborne pathogens despite their low water content It systematically reviews and ranks various categories of LMF such as cereals dried protein products and spices based on their food safety risks The book aims to assist in risk management by providing a comprehensive analysis of data related to LMF associated outbreaks thus helping to develop effective food safety interventions It is intended for food safety professionals and policymakers involved in managing foodborne risks Shiga Toxin-producing Escherichia Coli (STEC) and Food World Health Organization, 2019-01-22 Strains of pathogenic Escherichia coli that are characterized by their ability to produce Shiga toxins are referred to as Shiga toxin producing E coli STEC STEC are an important cause of foodborne disease and infections have been associated with a wide range of human clinical illnesses ranging from mild non bloody diarrhoea to bloody diarrhoea BD and haemolytic uraemic syndrome HUS which often includes kidney failure A high proportion of patients are hospitalized some develop end stage renal disease ESRD and some die The information requested by CCFH is divided into three main areas the global burden of disease and source attribution hazard identification and characterization and monitoring including the status of the currently available analytical methods This report provides an overview of the work undertaken in response to the request from the CCFH and provides the conclusions and advice of the Expert Group based on the currently available information Shiga toxin-producing Escherichia coli (STEC) and food: attribution, characterization, and monitoring Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, World Health Organization, 2019-02-18 Shiga toxin producing Escherichia coli STEC infections are a substantial health issue worldwide Circa 2010 foodborne STEC caused 1 million human illnesses 128 deaths and 13 000 Disability Adjusted Life Years DALYs Targeting interventions appropriately relies on identifying those strains of greatest risk to human health and determining the types of foods that cause STEC infections There are hundreds of STEC serotypes however based on the evidence gathered during the review the Expert Group concluded that the serotype of the STEC strain should not be considered a virulence criterion All STEC strains with the same serotype should not be assumed to carry the same virulence genes and to pose the same risk as many STEC virulence genes are mobile and can be lost or transferred to other bacteria this report proposes a set of criteria for categorizing the potential risk of severity of illness associated with a STEC in food is recommended based on evidence of virulence gene profiles and associations with clinical severity The criteria could be applied by risk managers in a risk based management approach to control STEC in food While ruminants and other land animals are considered the main reservoirs for STEC various largescale outbreaks have been linked to other foods Thus the report also addresses source attribution of foodborne STEC infections globally in order to inform the development of international standards by the Codex Alimentarius on the control of STEC and in particular identify the foods which should be the focus of those standards Finally it provides a review of monitoring programmes and methodology for STEC which can serve as a reference for countries planning to develop such programmes Risk Assessment of Listeria Monocytogenes in Ready-to-eat Foods Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2004 Cases of listeriosis in food appear to be predominantly associated with ready to eat products This publication contains a summary of the risk assessment jointly undertaken by the Food and Agriculture Organization and the World Health Organization into the problems posed by the pathogen in ready to eat foods It covers specific risk management questions posed by the Codex Committee on Food Hygiene CCFH and outlines issues to be considered when implementing control measures including the establishment of microbiological criteria The full technical report is available separately ISBN 9251051275 Risk Assessment of Campylobacter Spp. in Broiler Chickens, 2009 FAO and WHO have undertaken a risk assessment of Campylobacter spp in broiler chickens as described in this volume An interpretative summary of that work is described in this volume This assessment compared the risk for a variety of scenarios and mitigation measures for control of the organism in a range of broiler chicken products It also includes a review and analysis of current scientific information and a description of the risk model Back cover Modelling Microorganisms in Food S. Brul, Suzanne van Gerwen, Marcel Zwietering, 2007-03-19 While predictive microbiology has made a major contribution to food safety many uncertainties linger such as the growing evidence that traditional microbial inactivation models do not always fit the experimental data and that all the bacteria of one population do not necessarily behave homogeneously These problems are all the more acute because of a growing interest in minimal processing techniques that is requiring greater precision from models Edited by leading authorities this volume reviews current developments in quantitative microbiology Part 1 discusses best practice in constructing quantitative models and Part 2 looks at specific areas in new approaches to modelling microbial behavior Microbiological Hazards in Fresh Leafy Vegetables and Herbs Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, World Health Organization, 2008 The meeting addressed the pathways for contamination survival and persistence of microbiological hazards associated with leafy vegetables and herbs and the potential management options from primary production through to the consumer Consideration was given to all aspects of the farm to fork continuum i e including pre harvest and post harvest Interventions for the Control of Non-typhoidal Salmonella Spp. in Beef and Pork Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2016 Non typhoidal Salmonella spp are estimated to cause 93.8 million cases of acute gastroenteritis and 155 000 deaths globally each year approximately 85% of which are estimated to be foodborne establishing Salmonella as having a significant public health and economic impact on society Pork products are among the top food borne sources of Salmonella globally while beef products have been implicated in several large outbreaks in recent years Contamination of beef and pork with Salmonella can also have a negative impact on the agri food and trade sectors due to costly recalls of products and by limiting market access FAO and WHO have undertaken a systematic review of the available evidence on interventions to control Salmonella in beef and pork from primary production through processing This information was then considered by an expert meeting which provided recommendations on efficacious interventions This report presents the outcome of those deliberations as well as the review of studies on which the discussions were based providing the reader with a wealth of up to date information on the currently available interventions for the control of Salmonella in beef and pork Publisher s description      International Seafood Trade Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2009 The meeting included a range of views regarding the risks and challenges inherent to the recent developments in international seafood trade with views from government officials business representatives and academia The symposium highlighted that the seafood sector is extremely dynamic and is increasingly becoming a global sector Risks include the pressure of global demand on capture fisheries that are often overexploited meeting the higher sanitary and phytosanitary requirements being set by the markets and the development of voluntary ecolabels Opportunities include better management of marine resources further development of the aquaculture sector advancement of technology to meet sanitary and phytosanitary requirements and enhancement of the value added sector in developing countries FAO University of Akureyri Symposium 1 2 February 2007 Akureyri Iceland      HMSO Agency Catalogue Great Britain.
