On the Cover, and Above:

The 1775 "Griffin Smooth Rifle" represents a high end product – and an important early rifle made by Christian Oerter in the Moravian gunshop at Christian's Spring, Pennsylvania, being signed and dated with location. This smooth rifle retains 95% of its original finish and most of the wire – a great gun to collect, enjoy and study!

We've been conditioned to view old rifles in black & white photos, but art, craft and longrifles were made to be viewed in the hand and in color. The subtlety of hattersconch in the maple with a shiny red varnish above show depth and variation, while bold brass and silver ribbon, fanciful carving, initialed patchbox and large silver star with fine engraving demonstrate the full range of the makers' talents. Previously known Oerter rifles used wire in lieu of carving – but yes, he could carve! The griffin with beak and claws of bone and a silver nail for the eye show creativity. Various carving techniques create a layered appearance of feathers on the body and wings, and make us wonder what else came from the shop!

About this Second Edition:

In 1980, George Shumway published the first of his monumental, two volume Rifles of Colonial America. This in-depth look at rifles and gunmaking in early America brought together George's "painted light" photographs of many rifles with what was known about individual gunmakers and regional "schools" or styles of work. It was George's wish that the books would encourage further research and bring to light additional early rifles. This new edition helps to further that goal.

CCTP Publishing and George Shumway Publisher have collaborated to produce this revised and expanded edition, with a substantial number of the rifles re-photographed in color. Access to rifles and photographs from organizations auction houses, museums, and private collectors made this possible, and the latest photographic and printing technologies were applied. Where color photographs of rifles were not available, black and white originals were scanned and enhanced for improved quality.

Significant new research has also been added, along with ten previously unknown or unpublished rifles, also in full color.

A Cultural History of Firearms in the Age of Empire Karen Jones,2016-03-16 Firearms have been studied by imperial historians mainly as means of human destruction and material production Yet firearms have always been invested with a whole array of additional social and symbolical meanings By placing these meanings at the centre of analysis the essays presented in this volume extend the study of the gun beyond the confines of military history and the examination of its impact on specific colonial encounters By bringing cultural perspectives to bear on this most pervasive of technological artefacts the contributors explore the densely interwoven relationships between firearms and broad processes of social change In so doing they contribute to a fuller understanding of some of the most significant consequences of British and American imperial expansions Not the least original feature of the book is its global frame of reference Bringing together historians of different periods and regions A Cultural History of Firearms in the Age of Empire overcomes traditional compartmentalisations of historical knowledge and encourages the drawing of novel and illuminating comparisons across time and space 1998 Standard Catalog of Firearms Ned Schwing,1998 Guns and Contemporary Society Glenn H.
