Multinunit Organization and Multimarket Strategy Joel Baum, H.R. Greve, 2001-06-15 A conspicuous feature of the modern economy is the multitude of multinunit systems that operate in several markets an organizational form that arguably rivals the M form as the 20th century's most successful This text draws various ideas together to present possible developments Zeitschrift für Politikwissenschaft, 2006

Variations in Organization Science Joel A. C. Baum, Bill McKelvey, 1999-05-14 In my judgment this book in honor of Donald T Campbell will be very influential and highly cited It will become a must read for Ph D students and scholars in strategy and organization theory Arie Lewin Duke University The topics in this volume are cutting edge and the contributors are first rate The book is well anchored Donald T Campbell has had a profound influence on the field Moreover the book is well conceptualized socio cultural evolution co evolution methods modeling and epistemology are key issues in organization science right now Michael Tushman Harvard University If he were an assistant professor today what would social science giant Donald T Campbell be pursuing in the field of organization science Joel A C Baum and Bill McKelvey explore this question in Variations in Organization Science This volume reveals and celebrates Campbell's many contributions to organization science by presenting new variations that stem directly from his work Rather than analyze Campbell's theories the authors present ideas that Campbell might have pursued if he were currently a doctoral student This volume is unique in its focus on coevolution and multilevel coevolutionary analysis as well as in its range of subject matter from empirical studies to leading edge epistemological discourses Each of the book's four main sections focuses on a major aspect of Campbell's legacy blind variation selection and retention multilevel coevolution process level analysis and modeling and epistemology and methodology In addition the volume includes a Foreword by Barbara Frankel Campbell and an unusual Appendix Donald Campbell's complete curriculum vitae Variations in Organization Science should be on the top of the reading list for any organization scientist interested in organizational evolution change and competitiveness This volume will also appeal to any scholar interested in the human and social capital base of firms and how organizational knowledge and learning work to provide the basis of competitive advantage

Crash Test Without Dummies Ji-Yub Kim, 2000 Contemporary management theory business school curricula and practitioner oriented advice has what I call a success bias with a strong focus on how firms can learn from successful firms through the adoption of their best practices In my dissertation I pursue the alternative notion that failure by other organizations can also have a positive value to organizational performance Theories of interorganizational learning imply that failure of a subset of firms in a population may produce survival enhancing learning by other firms that observed the failure They also imply that near failure defined as being on the brink of failure followed by recovery may have even greater value under some circumstances I examined these claims systematically by using a sample of all of the 2 724 FDIC insured U S commercial banks chartered since 1984 over a 15 year period 1984 1998 Additionally I explore the role of competitive dynamics and different dimensions of proximity in the interorganizational learning process Results support theories of interorganizational learning from failure by providing evidence that failure and near failure experience of others can produce survival enhancing learning by remaining firms Specifically I find that industry near failure experiences enhanced survival enhancing learning while industry prior failure experiences do not Results also show that failure and near failure experience in a related but separate industry influences survival enhancing learning in banks Viewed as a whole the pattern of results point to potentially conflicting influences of the visibility versus applicability of vicarious experience and to a complicated relationship between the effects of interorganizational learning and competitive dynamics among firms My dissertation contributes to theories of vicarious learning by systematically examining predictions that failure can produce survival enhancing learning by comparing total failure to near failure among one's own industry and competitors and by testing inter industry effects It deepens the growing literature on subtle influences of interorganizational learning and special features of learning from failure versus success It also provides valuable insight for managers who seek to obtain sustainable competitive advantage by learning from the experience of others and to industry leaders seeking to enhance the overall survival and prosperity of groups of organizations
