Population Trends In Indonesia:

Population Trends in Indonesia Widjojo Nitisastro, 2006 The first comprehensive demographic study of Indonesia this book makes an important contribution to the understanding of the political and economic problems both past and present of the world's fourth most populous country. It demonstrates that the period 1970 to 1980 will be particularly crucial for Indonesia and will require careful social and economic planning. The author, who is acknowledged to be Indonesia's foremost economist-demographer, amasses and corrects population estimates made during the era of Dutch rule including material from as early as 1775. He discusses the census of 1930 and the impact of events of the 1940s: World War II, the Japanese occupation, and the Indonesian revolution on population trends. He points out, for example, that low birth and high mortality rates during the subsequent period suggest that the mean age of Indonesia's working age population is undergoing a radical rejuvenation. Using the census of 1961 as a base, Mr. Widjojo projects Indonesia's population to 1991, forecasting the probable growth rates of the total population and of its various components. He shows how the population breaks down into extremely uneven age groups and suggests the serious consequences of this situation. He emphasizes that the dramatic increases in the number of 15 to 24 year olds that occurred in the population during the second half of the 1960s and that are projected for the 1970s make careful preparation for the future imperative if crises in the labor market and in the field of education are to be dealt with successfully. Population Trends in Indonesia now brought back to life as a member of Equinox Publishing's Classic Indonesia series serves as a model for future research and proves invaluable to economic and social planners working throughout the developing world. Widjojo Nitisastro, former Dean of the Faculty of Economics at the University of Indonesia, was Chairman of President Suharto's Economic Team and of the National Development Planning Agency. A graduate of the University of Indonesia, Professor Widjojo received a Ph.D. degree in Economics from the University of California at Berkeley.

Analysis of statistical tables on population trends in Indonesia from 1775 to 1961 and forecasts of growth rates with particular reference to the economic implications and social implications thereof in respect of labour supply and educational needs covers the historical background, the role of Netherlands etc. and concludes that the need for birth control is urgent and labour intensive activity essential for economic development. UN mentioned References The Demographic Dimension in Indonesian Development Graeme Hugo, 1987. Indonesia is the world's fifth most populous nation. Its population is still growing at 2 per cent per annum and will exceed 200 million in another 10 years time. This is the first detailed analysis of population growth in Indonesia as it affects national development, written by 4 authors who have been intimately involved in population research and planning in Indonesia over the past 15 years. The book takes an historical approach in recognition of the continuities between problems of population growth and distribution in colonial times and those faced today. Because of the remarkable diversity of Indonesia, a regional approach is also stressed and regional differences are highlighted through Indonesia Assessment Gavin W. Jones, Terence H. Hull, 1997-06-16 Indonesia's population the fourth largest in the world is expected to pass the 200 million mark in 1997. It has sustained high rates of economic growth over the past two decades. This has undoubtedly been related to its success in moderating earlier high rates of population growth and to its significant accomplishments in human resource development. This volume is therefore timely. Contemporary Demographic Transformations in China, India and Indonesia Christophe Z. Guilmoto, Gavin W. Jones, 2015-12-12 This book examines the profound demographic transformation affecting China, India, and Indonesia where 40% of the world's people live. It offers a systematic comparative approach that will help readers to better understand the changing social and regional recomposition of the population in these regions. The chapters present a detailed investigation and mapping of regional trends in mortality, fertility, migration, and urbanization, education, and aging. Throughout the analysis, carefully considers how these trends affect economic and social development. Coverage also raises global theoretical questions about the singular ways in which each of these three countries have achieved their demographic transition. As the authors reveal, demographic trends seem to be somewhat linear and anticipatable, providing Asia's three demographic giants and their governments a formidable advantage in planning for the future. But the evolution of human mobility in China, India, and Indonesia closely intertwined as it is with changing economic conditions, appears less predictable and ranks high among the major challenges to demographic knowledge in the coming decades. Offering an insightful look into the components, implications, and regional variations of a changing population, this book will appeal to social scientists, demographers, anthropologists, sociologists, epidemiologists, and specialists in Asian studies People, Population, and Policy in Indonesia Terence H. Hull, 2005 Since its inception in 1945, the Republic of Indonesia has experienced a series of profound social changes. The spread of schooling, the transformation of the economy, and the consolidation of a unified state have transformed the lives of Indonesian citizens. It is seldom recognized, however, that the most fundamental changes have occurred in the family sphere. Marriages that used to be arranged by parents are now more likely to be determined by couples. Unions occur when the couples are much older. The adoption of birth control practices has reduced fertility from large families to a two-child norm in just over thirty years. These changes have molded the lives of individual women described here through a series of personal case studies and shaped the size and structure of the national population as seen in the statistics produced by the government on a regular basis. The story that emerges gives strong hints about where the Indonesian population will be heading in the next fifty years, with a growing proportion of aged citizens. Most importantly, People, Population, and Policy in Indonesia shows the importance of collaborations between Indonesian leaders and their foreign colleagues in the efforts to
