or suicide and Courtney's daughter Rose was one of them. Rose's apparent death by suicide at nineteen in a backyard shed had left her mother craving answers. The police seemed unable to give her. Inspired by Courtney's courage and grief, the Advertiser team hoped to shed light on Rose's death and put Courtney's mind at rest. But what they found as their investigation of one death rolled into another five was disturbing. Lack of urgency, sloppy searches, poor communication and assumptions by police were just some of the problems. As the team probed further, even bigger questions about whether Indigenous Australians, especially women, are heard when they speak. Based on the podcast Dying Rose, this is a compelling look at young Indigenous women's vulnerability to danger and how, when their lives are cut short, their families are left to cope with a grief seemingly compounded by indifference.
