Perspectives In Urban Entomology:

Perspectives in Urban Entomology G. W. Frankie, C. S. Koehler, 2013-09-17 Perspectives in Urban Entomology is a collection of papers presented at the Ecology and Management of Insect Populations in Urban Environments held in Washington D C in 1976 This collection deals with urban entomology with emphasis on insects insect plant relationships and arthropods in the urban environments One paper examines the causes why certain species manage to survive in an urban environment while others do not The book cites one example the Rothamsted insect survey and analyzes the pressures of development in the surrounding land area One paper addresses the educational and esthetic value of an insect plant relationship in an ever expanding development of urban spaces Another paper shows the value and benefit of a scientific investment in urban agriculture defined as small scale agriculture in urban areas as contributing to food crops Some papers also examine the use of insecticides and technology transfer in the management of urban pest control This book will be valuable for entomologists urban planners and developers environmentalists and for general readers residing in metropolitan areas

Urban Entomology G. W. Frankie, 1983-10-01 The study of insects present in the urban environment is an increasingly important field of entomology Urban Entomology is the first work devoted to this topic Integrated Pest Management Dale G. Bottrell, Council on Environmental Quality (U.S.), 1979 Integrated pest management IPM is the selection integration and implementation of pest control based on predicted economic ecological and sociological consequences IPM seeks maximum use of naturally occurring pest controls including weather disease agents predators and parasites In addition IPM utilizes various biological physical and chemical control and habitat modification techniques Artificial controls are imposed only as required to keep a pest from surpassing intolerable population levels predetermined from accurate assessments of the pest damage potential and the ecological sociological and economic costs of the control measures The presence of a pest species does not necessarily justify action for its control and in fact tolerable infestations may be desirable providing food for important beneficial insects for example

Insect Conservation and Urban Environments Tim R. New, 2015-09-18 Includes chapters on assessing changes among assemblages and in individual species the variety of general threats notably habitat changes and impacts of alien species and more particularly urban threats The first global overview and synthesis of the impacts of urbanisation on insects and their relatives and the needs and theoretical and practical background to conserving them in urban environments Insect dependence on open spaces in built up areas suggests a wide range of management options for conservation from individual site including novel habitats such as green roofs to landscape level connectivity These measures all discussed with specific examples involve all sectors of humanity from government agencies to individual householders and citizen scientist groups Each chapter includes pertinent and recent Agriculture rural development, and related agencies appropriations for fiscal year 1991 United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Appropriations. Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development, and Related Agencies, 1990 Handbook of Biological Control T. W. Fisher, Thomas S. Bellows, L. E. Caltagirone, D. L. Dahlsten, Carl B. Huffaker, G. Gordh, 1999-09-20 For many years the use of chemical agents such as pesticides and herbicides has been effective in controlling the many varieties of pests that infest both agricultural crops and backyard gardens. However, these pests are gradually becoming resistant to these agents because the agents themselves are acting as selective factors, making the pests better and better able to resist and persist. As a result, the use of biological controlling agents is increasing. This book is a comprehensive and authoritative handbook of biological control.

Perspectives in Urban Entomology G. W. Frankie, C. S. Koehler, 1978 The Urban Environment Gerald Dawe, 1990 This publication is the first of its kind; it draws together a vast amount of research from the 1980s in the form of 1 768 cross-referenced abstracts derived from a systematic search of around forty periodicals and supplemented by the Centre for Urban Ecology's own knowledge of publications in this area. Studies summarized range from complex multidisciplinary works aimed at integrating urban ecological knowledge in urban areas through to the observations of amateur naturalists.
