Department of Labor, 1985 Feminist Perspectives on Sustainable Development Wendy Harcourt, 1994 This collection captures the vitality and urgency of feminists' responses to the environment and development debate. The authors, researchers, activists, and policy makers from North and South offer new ways of challenging the present dominating knowledge systems and development institutions and discuss the difficulties women face on the margins of the development process. Contributions on resource management, power, knowledge, production, culture, development institutions, and politics, health, and economics show how gender relations are not simply a footnote to our understanding of history and societies but must be central to the development discourse. In so doing, they suggest that diversity itself is necessary to the creation of new paradigms of development that are built upon gender equity, secure livelihoods, ecological sustainability, and political participation. The Journal of Economic Perspectives, 2000 This journal attempts to fill a gap between the general interest press and other academic economics journals. Its articles relate to active lines of economics research, economic analysis of public policy issues, state-of-the-art economic thinking, and directions for
