Pest Control In Rice:

Pest Management in Rice L.G. Copping, 2012-12-06 The four day international Conference on Pest Management in Rice which is the subject of this volume was the third in an ongoing series of meetings on tropical crops organised by the Pesticides Group of the Society of Chemical Industry London The participants came from both the public and private sectors and from many different countries All the major groups of pests weeds microorganisms arthropods and rodents were considered as the organisers believe that it is necessary to address the total pest management problems in each particular growing area and the variety of the papers indicates the importance of a multi disciplinary approach to their solution Rice is one of the most important world crops and is the major source of food for around 60% of the world s population with a world production of 500 million tonnes from 150 million hectares of land Since world stocks amount to only two months supply many people are at risk from famine Moreover it has been estimated that the world requirement in 2020 will be about 760 million tonnes an increase of 50% This pressure of population on food makes efficient pest management vital and is the reason for bringing together experts from all over the world to this major conference Insect Pests of Rice M. Miller, 2012-12-06 Due to the worldwide importance of rice as a crop plant the biology of rice pests is of great interest to agricultural research This timely book brings together contributions from the fields of entomology agronomy population ecology and biostatistics to provide a comprehensive survey of rice insect interaction Among the topics discussed are crop loss assessment economic thresholds and injury levels for insect pests mosquito leafhoppers and planthoppers population dynamics pheromone utilization techniques for predator evaluation chemical based for insect resistance applications of tissue culture systems analysis and rice pest management With its emphasis on experimental techniques of pest analysis and control Rice Insects Management Strategies will be a valuable reference for researchers and practitioners alike The Economics of Integrated Pest Control in Irrigated Rice Hermann Waibel, 2012-12-06 As a result of the green revolution the use of yield increasing inputs such as fertilizer and pesticides became a matter of course in irrigated rice farming in Southeast Asia. Pesticides were applied liberally both as a guarantee against crop failure and as a means of fully utilizing the existing yield potential of the crops. However, since outbreaks of pests such as the brown planthopper BPH or the tungro virus continued to occur despite the application of chemicals, a change of approach began to take place. It is now being realized more and more in Southeast Asia that crop protection problems cannot be resolved solely by the application of chemicals. In the past several years, increasing efforts have therefore been made to introduce as a first step supervised crop protection, leading gradually to integrated pest management (Kranz, 1982). Although the crop protection problems naturally differ in the different developing countries in Southeast Asia, the economic situation prevailing in these countries can nevertheless be regarded as an important common determinant. Pesticide imports use up scarce foreign currency and thus compete with other imports essential to development. For the individual rice farmer, the problem is basically the same: his cash funds are limited and he must carefully weigh whether to use them for purchasing pesticides, fertilizer, or certified seed. In view of this constraint, it is becoming necessary to abandon the purely prophylactic routine calendar spraying and instead employ critically timed and need-based pesticide applications.
