Relative Abundance of Pesticides in Fruits and Vegetables by Gc/Ms Samia Siddique, Zaib Hussain, Syed Zahid Ali, 2012-05 GC MS is a technique used for the identification of pesticide residues in a given sample The extraction of pesticides from the sample is done by using a solvent The GC MS gives the elution retention time and molecular weight of each pesticide in the residue The data obtained is then compared with that of a referenced pesticide In this experiment spinach guava and orange were used The samples were divided into two groups fruits vegetables with pesticides and fruits vegetables without pesticides The samples were extracted with acetonitrile in a mixture of toluene The extract was then analyzed in GC MS The elution and retention time of pesticides residue was calculated and the molecular weight of each pesticide was determined The results showed that low molecular weight pesticides were eluted first and then the high molecular weight pesticides were eluted The molecular weight of each pesticide residue was compared with the reference data and the pesticides were identified and the relative abundance of each pesticide was calculated from GC MS spectrum Multiresidue Methods for the Analysis of Pesticide Residues in Food Horacio Heinzen, Leo M.L. Nollet, Amadeo R. Fernandez-Alba, 2017-10-10 In the last decades the public concern on the pesticide residues content in foods have been steadily rising The global development of food trade implies that aliments from everywhere in the world can reach the consumer s table Therefore the identification of agricultural practices that employ different pesticides combinations and application rates to protect produce must be characterized as they left residues that could be noxious to human health. However, the possible number of pesticides and its metabolites of toxicological relevance to be found in a specific commodity is almost 1500 and the time needed to analyze them one by one makes this analytical strategy a unrealistic task. To overcome this problem, the concept of Multi Residue Methods (MRM) for the analysis of pesticide traces have been developed. The advent of new and highly sensitive instrumentation based in hyphenated chromatographic systems to coupled mass analyzers (GC-MS/MS or LC-MS/MS) permitted simultaneously the identification and the determination of up to hundreds of pesticide residues in a single chromatographic run. Multi-residue Methods for the Analysis of Pesticide Residues in Food presents the analytical procedures developed in the literature as well as those currently employed in the most advanced laboratories that perform routinely Pesticide Residue Analysis in foods. In addition to these points, the regulations, guidelines and recommendations from the most important regulatory agencies of the world on the topic will be commented and contrasted.
