

PERFORMANCE-BASED LEARNING

DEFINITION

Performance-based learning focuses on students demonstrating specific skills and competencies, rather than just acquiring knowledge. It emphasizes real-world application and requires students to produce tangible, meaningful products or performances. The assessment is based on the outcome of these tasks rather than traditional tests or exams.

EXAMPLES

- Science Experiment: Students design and conduct an experiment to understand a scientific concept, then present their findings and conclusions.
- Portfolio Creation: Rather than taking a written test on art techniques, art students compile a portfolio showcasing their use of different techniques and styles.
