Urban Infrastructure Remo Dalla Longa,2023-03-01 The book deals with the concept of urban infrastructure and the strong evolution of globalization in particular the driving force taken by global cities Urban infrastructure is a constituent part of the global cities both have a synergistic evolution The main reference is to western global cities in the intertwining of financialization settling and brownfield which is a little different from the urbanization of other global cities of other non developed countries or emerging countries There is therefore a significant link between globalization and urban infrastructure The occurrence of slowbalization can have consequences on urban areas infrastructures and more generally on the different dichotomy between global city and nation With the pandemic infectious and the post COVID there is already a different configuration between the global city and the rest of the national territory A driving element of the urban infrastructure and the global city has been the financialization and identification of assets within global cities Urban infrastructure as an asset has grown considerably in the last two decades in the wake of what has already been highlighted previously for real estate There are contiguous issues that affect the concept of urban infrastructures and they are the enormous growth of finance and the landings of this in the great cities of the world with investments that first involved Real Estate and then urban infrastructures There has also been a technological revolution that has merged the ubiquitous technological infrastructure with other more traditional components of the infrastructure even apparently recent themes such as smart cities come from this evolutionary trend and merge with urban infrastructures The theme of smart cities if properly interpreted gives strength to the concept of urban infrastructure Post-Socialist Urban Infrastructures

Mabogunje,1992 This paper addresses the problems of governance in municipalities in Africa The concern has been to adapt traditional systems of governance to the needs of modern urban management This paper investigates the need for a new analysis of the twin problems of urban land and urban management in sub Saharan Africa This need is based on the apparent paradox between the dynamic city creating activities of civil societies in all of these countries and the weak capabilities of states to guide and direct these activities This paper focuses on governance at the community level where empowerment and accountability begin It argues that a prerequisite for dealing with these problems is an institutional environment with which the target populace is familiar and to which it is likely to relate in participating in managing the city The importance of the particularly dynamic systems of traditional governance at the lowest level in managing urban growth is only recently being recognized The Routledge Handbook of Architecture, Urban Space and Politics, Volume II Nikolina
