Primary School Leadership in Post-Conflict Rwanda Gilbert Karareba, Simon Clarke, Thomas O'Donoghue, 2017-08-08 This book explores the current status of primary schools in Rwanda and the history behind their development. It argues that current primary school leaders in the area encounter a wide range of problems relating to conflict prevention, teachers and school leaders professionalism, financial and resourcing constraints, student attrition and parental disengagement, many of which can be attributed to the legacies of war and the genocide in 1994. The book also presents a range of strategies that are pursued by school leaders while dealing with these concerns as the Rwandan government invests in reconstructing education following the country's turmoil. Through examining the issues of the past and the present, the book provides valuable insights for researchers of educational leadership, school leaders, education policy makers and those in charge of preparing developing and implementing professional development programmes for school leaders and teachers in Rwanda as well as in other post-war and developing countries.

Exploring School Leadership in England and the Caribbean Paul Miller, 2016-01-28 What drives school leaders? What do they do on a day-to-day basis? What helps or constrains their decision making? What keeps them focused amidst challenges? Rather than applying theory to practice, Exploring School Leadership in England and the Caribbean draws on how school leaders practice and experience their own leadership. Paul Miller draws on case studies from Jamaica and England to explore what it means to be a school leader and explores a wide range of issues including accountability, performativity, inclusion and multiculturalism, technology, staffing and resourcing decisions. While no two school leaders will have identical experiences as a school leader, Paul Miller draws on the first-hand accounts of school leaders to show that regardless of school size, type and location, there are a number of common experiences and themes. Miller acknowledges that the practice of school leadership is occurring in an uncertain economic environment buoyed by a fast-paced policy context where by targets linked to national economic development are the new normal. He concludes that school leadership is a continuous balancing act driven by and experienced through an Economic motor model of schooling which he proposes.

School Leadership, Citizenship Education and Politics in China Shuqin Xu, 2016-08-23 This book examines and theorizes the dynamics and complexities of leadership in citizenship education in junior secondary schools in Shanghai, China. Specifically, it examines from a macro and micro political theoretical perspective the interactions between principals and school party secretaries (SPSs) and how they respond to the demands of macro and micro political actors. This qualitative empirical research found four major school leadership citizenship education scenarios in which principals and SPSs addressed the interests of different macro and micro political actors. Moreover, principals and SPSs enjoyed a complicated working relationship at the micro political school level in which they collaborated to fulfill their responsibilities and respond to school macro and micro political actors while competing for power over leadership in citizenship education. Principals and SPSs' leadership in citizenship education was shaped by inter-related factors including diverse influences in a multi leveled world the integration of politics and education the demands of macro and micro political actors and personal factors To interpret these findings this study proposes a theoretical framework for understanding leadership in citizenship education in China as a political exercise This theoretical framework is useful for understanding the complexity of school and citizenship education leadership the micro political relationship between Chinese principals and SPSs and their dynamic and complex interactions with macro and micro political actors      Reframing the Path to School Leadership Lee G.
