Science and Politics of Foreign Aid B. Hassler, 2003-03-31 Contemporary international aid can be beneficial to both the donor and recipient countries Hassler Sodertorn U Huddinge Sweden investigates to what extent Swedish environmental assistance to the Baltic States can be explained by self interested Swedish behavior The author develops a theoretical framework for the analysis of Sweden s assistance and validates the model against empirical data on the Swedish project portfolio His data analysis suggests that while the driving forces behind the formulation of policy were complex the policy does appear to have had important components of self interest No subject index Annotation c 2003 Book News Inc Portland OR booknews com

Science and Politics of Foreign Aid B. Hassler, 2011-06-27 Contemporary international aid consists of a wide range of various support programs where the end result in many cases not only reflects the needs of the recipient country but also the interests of the donor country In Science and Politics of Foreign Aid Swedish Environmental Support to the Baltic States it is shown that this particular support has been directed primarily towards areas of joint concern such as air pollution and effluents to the Baltic Sea Environmental problems with primarily local effects have to a large extent been neglected in the Swedish support program The requirement on the Baltic recipient countries to finance a specific fraction of each joint program with local resources has furthermore drained the local national environmental budgets from resources making it very difficult for these countries to mitigate various local environmental hazards by themselves In contrast to many previous foreign aid studies where various donor country biases often are suggested but not empirically validated this book gives an in depth view of how a particular support program is influenced by specific and self interested considerations

Greening Aid? Robert L. Hicks, Bradley C. Parks, J. Timmons Roberts, Michael J. Tierney, 2008-03-13 Every year billions of dollars of environmental aid flow from the rich governments of the North to the poor governments of the South Why do donors provide this aid What do they seek to achieve How effective is the aid given And does it always go to the places of greatest environmental need From the first Earth Summit in Stockholm in 1972 to the G8 Gleneagles meeting in 2005 the issue of the impact of aid on the global environment has been the subject of vigorous protest and debate How much progress has there been in improving environmental protection and clean up in the developing world What explains the patterns of environmental aid spending and distribution is it designed to address real problems achieve geopolitical or commercial gains abroad or buy political mileage at home And what are the consequences for the estimated 4 million people that die each year from air pollution unsafe drinking water and lack of sanitation All of these questions and many more are addressed in this groundbreaking text which is based on the authors work compiling the most comprehensive dataset of foreign aid ever assembled By evaluating the likely environment impact of over 400 000 development projects by more than 50 donors to over 170 recipient nations between 1970 and 2001 Greening Aid represents a unique state of the art picture of what is happening in foreign assistance and its impact on the environment Greening Aid
