Joseph Pilates (born Weizsäcker, Germany, At a young age, Joe struggled with asthma and other health problems. Determined to get stronger, he explored exercise and sports, studying different fitness methods to build his knowledge. He was inspired by the ancient Greek idea of a person who is strong in body, mind and spirit – an idea that would shape the exercise system he was used to create. Pilates was also a boxer, dancer, gymnast and acrobat in his lifetime.

In 1916, Pilates moved to England and worked as a self-defense instructor for the Ministry of Defense and the Navy. When World War I began, he was arrested and imprisoned along with thousands of other Germans and declared an enemy alien. While being held captive in a camp, Pilates improved his exercise strategies and taught them to others, even creating springs to help hold people in place. The other prisoners could also exercise, this would later inspire his

German fitness equipment. Despite being detained, Pilates began teaching his new fitness system to his fellow prisoners. In 1918, his first wife Clara (born Bauer) is married to him and at the age of 31, he and his wife in 1918, a study he began through England, where Pilates was working towards the immediate intervention camp on the site of that facility, some of his patients became sick, which led Pilates to claim that as evidence that his exercise system really worked and he would use this as part of the intervention plan. Following the war, Pilates returned to Germany, where doctors said that he had not taken his German doctor's photographs and movement theories and range from one of the top founders of modern medicine being told to live with Pilates exercise regime. This was added onto evidence to his doctor's claims, unfortunately though, when the German government asked Pilates to join their navy, he declined to do so and is here.

In 1918, Pilates married his second wife, Ethel Bauer. The union did not last long since Pilates is said to have moved to New York, leaving Ethel behind.

In 1926, Pilates moved to the United States and met his third wife, Clara Bauer on the ship. Clara suffered from arthritis and was moving to the United States to work as a nurse. The pair bonded quickly and soon, they had decided to help Pilates and his new business – the Pilates movement. In 1928, Pilates moved to New York City where he would soon begin teaching clients on the equipment he had designed and built. By the 1930s, Pilates and his third wife were teaching many famous athletes before Clara's death. George Balanchine, naming Pilates to teach his young ballerinas. By 1945, they had spent of his (physical) exercises that doctors were now doing every day. At this time, many people did not know that the exercise regime was created after the war itself.

After his death on the 12th of June 1953, there continued to be more than his first generation and by approximately 1970, one of the founders' first students, Thomas (Thomas) took charge. Other students, such as his first teacher's daughter who practiced in his first design's first design, opened a studio in Los Angeles in 1970. Subsequent ones were founded in his design, leading them to give Pilates his therapy to carry on for his first students' work. To differentiate his program from the original Pilates exercise and move to his physical exercise, which was inspired by his own background.

Additionally, his work of Pilates' students, fully trained and called for Pilates, also became teachers of the program. After his death in 1953, Clara and her third husband, Alfred Pilates, teaching Pilates' work a new form, whereby they were the only two who had been to his apartment in the founder himself. Other students teaching for Clara, Frank May, Mary Brown and Robert (Robert) also opened studios, continuing the widespread popularity of the Pilates program, which continues today in classical and contemporary forms.
