Abstracts

Divinity is the objective reality of the Divine. It could be observed in nature, in deep ecology, in cosmology beyond ZPE, and in depth psychology. The Divine could be personified in human behavior when the organ brain achieves the desired level of perfection. A science of divinity and the Divine is possible to develop taking science (world), humanity (you, me, and they), and the spirit (consciousness) together. One beneficial spin off of this approach in worldly science is the development of an algorithm starting in consciousness and ending in space, time, and energy, describing how "will" is translated into an event.

Keywords: Akhanda worldview; Einstein's abandoned otherworld; Nondualism; Triple transcendence; Sadgana; Divinity in the series; Divinity in cell-systems; Experience of divinity.

Introduction

The Divine and divinity exist in the real world. Their existence throws the issue of their sensing, feelings, and experience with the systems psyche (Cognitive Organ), with or without the brain, with or without the blood-pumping heart. Consciousness-as-such is the Divine. Consciousness-as-experienced is not always so! Consciousness-as-articulated by a divine personality might help other persons to sense, feel and experience divinity. As contact with curd could convert the whole milk into curd, it is believed that the easier way of experiencing divinity is the association or physical contact of a divine personality. The Divine Grace, therefore, is real provided one's psyche, one's brain, and one's heart is in the state of receiving this Grace. In the extended scope of science, new physics might explain this deep 'abstract phenomenon. And thus, the development of a science of the Objective Reality of the Divine remains a possibility. In contrast to philosophy, science speaks in a common universal language. We hope, this universal common language would help us to develop the post-materialistic, non-reductionist and non-positivistic science of this highest quality in the real world in the third person's perspectives.

The author has already published three papers on the Science of Divinity [1,2,3]. The moot points in developing the science of divinity are as follows.

1. The experience of divinity has three cardinal components: An experience of Transcendence, a feeling of Peace, and an alluring sense of charm of an effulgent and resplendent, which is effectively soothing cognitively and biologically.

2. There are three levels of Transcendence. First transcendence is from the domain of cause time, space, and pleasure to the domain of respectively silence, stillness, emptiness, and nothingness. Second transcendence is from this silence stillness emptiness and nothingness to the domain of immortality, eternity, infinity, and Ananda respectively. Third transcendence begins from immortality, eternity, infinity, and Ananda and culminates in the primary Source of divinity, which is consciousness-as-such. On the ladder of triple transcendence, the science transits from a positivistic, objective, reductionist nature to the science of zero-point energy state. The second transition is from zero-point energy state to the science of quality, ending at the border of the Universe. The third transition is from the domains of quality to a non-qualifiable state of the Essence of the Multiversity. This is the Essence from which multiple universe(s) generate and vanish. Subsequent to triple transcendence follows a reversal, a step-wise inversion for reverting back to the four-dimensional space-time world. This posterior connection is responsible for

Science of Divinity Richard L. Price, 2005-08-01 This book speaks on Divinity It has nothing to do with C S Science of Divinity Yogesvarānanda Sarasvatī (Svāmī), 1992 Science and Divinity Working Together Alric A. Evans, 2025-02-13 The book explores the profound intersections between quantum physics cell biology neuroscience cosmology and other fields of scientific inquiry revealing a compelling correlation with the biblical narrative It suggests that a Divine activity has been and continues to be at work though often overlooked or misunderstood This is not a book about preaching doctrine or promoting a specific religion Instead it highlights an often ignored perspective how humanity has taken the concept of God and redefined it through the lens of man made traditions and religious frameworks which fall far short of capturing the essence of the Creator and Designer of all things The book challenges the limited anthropocentric view of an omniscient Creator that many have constructed a view that confines the Divine to human understanding This constrained perspective has led some to dismiss the existence of a Creator altogether simply because it doesn't align with our physical constructs or theological frameworks The narrative instead invites readers to step beyond these limitations and consider the possibility that Divine reality cannot be fully understood within the bounds of human logic theology or science alone By drawing from modern scientific discoveries the book presents a comparative exploration of how these findings not only support the existence of a Divine force but also offer insights into humanity's unique role and potential It emphasizes that we are far more significant than traditional narratives either religious or scientific have often acknowledged In fact the book posits that we are god-like beings with inherent capacities to influence and transform our world This perspective is supported by evidence from various disciplines including studies showing how our thoughts and beliefs can profoundly impact our physical health and well-being To make it clear this is not a book based upon the law of attraction mindset at all it just compares Science and Divinity by looking at our world's past scientific discoveries and biblical references and asks if this is really logical in the way things are interpreted or are truths just being willingly overlooked Ultimately the book argues for reconciling the divide between science and spirituality It advocates for a holistic understanding where these two realms are not seen as opposing forces but as complementary perspectives that together can enrich our understanding of both the universe and ourselves This integration has the potential to inspire not only a deeper appreciation of the Divine but also a more empowered view of humanity's role in shaping the future Science and Divinity K·r·s·nānand, 2011 Educational Times, 1898 A Dictionary of Miracles Ebenezer Cobham Brewer, 1884 The Educational Times, and Journal of the College of Preceptors, 1903 Education Outlook, 1902 Divinity Beyond Science Daljit Singh Birring, 2008 South African-American Survey, 1950 The Science of Divinity ; Or, Brahma Vigyana Swami Yogeshwaranand Saraswati, 1973 The Athenaeum, 1897 Science and health Mary Baker Eddy, 1902 Annual Register University of Chicago, 1899 The Science of Divinity Yogesvarānanda Sarasvatī (Svāmī), 1973 On Hindu religious life and philosophy Journal of
