

EXERCISE #2 - PRIVATE SECURITY RESEARCH AND PRIVATE AND PUBLIC POLICING: WHAT ARE THE ISSUES?

GROUP A: Students whose last name begins with the letters A-M must post initial responses to this discussion question. All others should read and comment as a part of their weekly engagement with their colleagues.

In "The Private Security Industry: A Review of the Definitions, Available Data, Sources, and Paths Moving Forward," the authors provide a review of the previous research conducted about the private security industry, including the ongoing discussion about the definition of private security.

Examine the various definitions, particularly the ones offered by Hallcrest I, Kakalik and Wildhorn, and Bottom and Kostanoski, then compare and contrast the definitions and explain in your own words how they differ and the implications for security directors when conducting risk assessments and developing their security plans.

Also review Green's and ASIS International's definition of private security and discuss how those might be more useful (or not) in facilitating your understanding of the risk management process that includes identifying the various threats to organizational assets.

REMEMBER: Be sure to cite your sources from both the Learning Materials and outside research.

The Policing Web Jean-Paul Brodeur, 2010-09-30 In this comprehensive study Jean Paul Brodeur examines the diversity of the policing web Policing agencies such as criminal investigation units intelligence services private security companies and military policing organizations are examined in addition to public uniformed police to show the extent to which policing extends far beyond the confines of public police working in uniform and visible to all The study also includes a consideration of military policing both when compatible with the values of democracy and when in opposition It also examines criminal organizations enforcing their own rules in urban zones deserted by the police and criminal individuals acting as police informants since they too are part of the policing web even though they do not qualify as legitimate policing agents or agencies The underlying argument of The Policing Web is that the diverse strands of the policing web are united by a common definition that emphasizes the licence granted to policing agencies to use either legally or with complete impunity means that are otherwise prohibited as crimes to the rest of the population This claim is argued for throughout the book and its paradoxical consequences investigated Although much effort is devoted to presenting a comprehensive model linking all the components of policing it is acknowledged that the policing web is by no means a neat and well integrated structure Even the belief that it will develop into a tightly coordinated system is in itself questionable Indeed the study shows that there is not just one policing web but several depending on the country police history and culture and the images of policing which shape the mind of the community These often overlooked factors are nonetheless essential components of the context of policing and are discussed within an international framework
